F. R. LAUNCHES HUGE JOB PLAN

NIGHT WALL ST. CLOSING PRICES

Today

To 54 Countries.
We Recognize Russia.
Nudist Idiocy,
Birth Control. 2 Views.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT asks fifty-four countries to keep their armies at home, and preserve peace on which depend "happiness, prosperity, the very lives of the men, women and children who inhabit the whole world."

The President puts the airplane first among attacking weapons that "fixed fortifications" can no longer resist, and expects all nations "wholly to eliminate from possession and use weapons which make possible successful attack."

Most important is the President's suggestion that "all the nations enter into a solemn, definite pact of non-aggression."

THIS MESSAGE, in plain English, no mysterious "code" was sent broadcast to the nations of the world, including Soviet Russia.

And that, according to Senator Borah, is an official recognition of Russia. If so, it puts an end to a ridiculous situation, bad for business.

THE SUGGESTED non-aggression pact, whatever it might be worth in cases of "insult to national honor" may prove to be the "world's best peace hope." The suggestion to "eliminate weapons that make possible successful attack" cannot be adopted unless the nations give up all airplanes. That, they cannot and will not do.

Any fleet of commercial airplanes, within twenty-four hours, can be adapted to dropping explosives and poison gas that would destroy any city.

PARIS CALLS President Roosevelt's message "a beautiful sermon," "very pious, very lofty." France "will accept President Roosevelt's suggestion in principle," while reserving certain rights involving national security.

Public opinion in America will also reserve certain rights, if only as a matter of economy. It cost us too much to get ready in a hurry last time, and after the billions were spent we had, to show for them, only airships that wouldn't fly, and surface ships that never went to sea.

PEACE TALK never checks the intelligent French in their preparation for what may come. As a "national defense measure" French factories were ordered yesterday to report to the "passive defense bureau" on the number of their employes and their capacity. This will tell the French government how many men it has ready to manufacture explosives, chemicals, airplanes and other useful things.

JAPAN PROCEEDS 'long lines laid out for Asia, regardless of Europe's League of Nations. Her plans include free colony in Northern China, and the capture of Peiping, the "forbidden city," seems near.

Rich Chinese are leaving Peiping, hurrying with movable property into the safer foreign areas of Tientsin. American missionaries are moving away from the Peiping area.

THE STOCK exchange, which had been drifting, was pleased with President Roosevelt's peace message. Stocks went up from one to five points. Brokers and speculators remember what happened when the other big war came and the stock exchange closed.

"NUDIST COLONIES," where men and women go naked, are reopening for the season in New Jersey and elsewhere. In one camp nudist cooks prepare food served by nudist waiters and waitresses.

Decency develops slowly, the other thing develops rapidly.

It took the human race, probably, a million years to learn to wear clothes, as they gradually lost their original covering of reddish hair. It takes them five minutes to change into "nudist" idiots.

GIVE MR. HITLER credit for one thing. He has told Germans literally, to "keep their shirts on." They will spend this summer fully clothed. They invented nudism and practiced it, but there will be no more of it under Hitler.

NEW YORK STATE'S "birth control federation" meets next Friday. "Fewer and better babies" is the idea, or, as some express it, "babies only when their mothers want them."

On religious grounds many believe that birth control is sinful. Others deplore it, because, if mothers had known and believed in it, there wouldn't have been any Caruso, Caryle, or Napoleon.

COMMON SENSE suggests that there is no reason why a mother should have a baby if she doesn't want it, and no reason for allowing a rich woman, with a competent doctor, to know all about birth control, while making it a crime to inform the poor, for whom extra children mean extra trouble.

HITLER TAKES STAND AGAINST WAR; BACKS U. S. IN APPEAL FOR PEACE

MORGAN AIDE HITS CASE OF MITCHELL

Prosecution Scores in Banker's Trial for Tax Evasion

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Government files and archives of the mighty banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. were opened to public gaze today in the government's effort to prove that Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank, evaded tax on an income of more than $4,000,000 by ·'am and deceit.

Three witnesses were called during the morning session, the first at which testimony has been heard; an internal revenue official, the Morgan office manager, and an accountant from the National City Company, a National City Bank affiliate of which Mitchell was also chairman.

DEPUTY TESTIFIES

Frederick Sommer, a deputy collector of internal revenue, identified Mitchell's income tax returns for 1929 and 1930 and they were introduced in evidence. On those returns Mitchell showed losses through the sale of securities which he claimed exempted him from tax payments. The government charges that those sales, one to his wife and one to W. D. Thornton, president of the Greene Cananea Copper Company were fake transactions entered into with the sole purpose of cheating the government of its due.

Leonard A. Keyes, Morgan office manager in charge of the institution's files, told of Morgan loans to Mitchell and to Thornton.

MORGAN LOAN CITED

The government alleges that the stock Mitchell claimed to have sold to his wife was at the time pledged for a Morgan loan and was held by that company as collateral and so would not have been sold to Mrs. Mitchell without Morgan consent even if she had had the money to pay for it, which the prosecution says she did not. Keyes said his files did not show any notification from Mitchell that he had sold any of the stock put up as collateral.

The Morgan records as to Thornton were placed in evidence without any figures being made public.

The last morning witness was William Werling, assistant to the head accountant of the National City Company. He said that from 1917 until 1930 the company had a custodian account for E. Rendt Mitchell, whom he identified as Mrs. Mitchell.

Repeal Would Pay For Job Program, F.R. Points Out

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(INS.)—Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, President Roosevelt pointed out to Congress today in the course of a special message on the emergency employment legislation, would produce automatically enough revenue to underwrite the whole of his proposed $3,300,000,000 public works program and make otherwise additional temporary taxes unnecessary.

The President promised that whenever the states voted the Eighteenth Amendment out of eristence he would see to it that any temporary taxes now about to be levied were eliminated.

Text of Roosevelt Huge Job Message

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress today recommending a public works program follows:

To the Congress:

Before the special session of the Congress adjourns, I recommend two further steps in our national campaign to put people to work.

My first request is that (1) the Congress provide for the machinery necessary for a great co-operative movement throughout all industry in order to obtain wide reemployment, to shorten the working week, to pay a decent wage for the shorter week and to prevent unfair competition and disastrous overproduction.

Employers cannot do this singly or even in organized groups, because such action increases costs and thus permits cutthroat underselling by selfish competitors unwilling to join in such a public-spirited endeavor.

ROOSEVELT LAUNCHES JOB PLAN

Huge Works Program, Industrial Control Plan to Congress

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—President Roosevelt today asked Congress for legislation which will permit the launching of a $3,300,000,000 public works program, and at the same time will allow industry, under government supervision, to enter into agreements designed to prevent unfair competition and disastrous over-production.

The President reported in a special message that at least $220,000,000 of additional revenue would be needed to undertake the public works program.

REPEAL TO CUT TAXES

He did not make specific recommendations as to how this money should be raised, leaving it to the discretion of Congress, but he did say that provisions should be made for the reduction or elimination of such additional taxes as fast as business improves, or whenever repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment permits a restoration of pre-prohibition revenue laws.

In asking that industry be empowered to organize within itself, the President contemplates modification of the anti-trust laws. He made clear, however, they should be retained basically and that the government supervision of private combinations be vigorously maintained.

'DECENT WAGES'

Through enactment of the public works-industry partnership bill, the President told Congress he hoped "to obtain wide reemployment, to shorten the working week, to pay a decent wage for the shorter week and to prevent unfair competition and disastrous overproductions."

In asking for the necessary machinery for an industrial co-

Peace for the United States of America

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S effort to keep peace among the war-mad nations of Europe is highly commendable as long as his performance is limited to sound advice and does not take the form of active participation in Europe's quarrels and conflicts.

As they stand the President's message to foreign governments may not mean a great deal or unfortunately, may mean altogether too much.

The steadying function of the Congress should be to make sure that they do NOT mean too much—that they shall not mean involvement of the peaceful United States in Europe's destructive wars.

President Roosevelt's plan, if it is a plan, or at any rate President Roosevelt's proposal, if it is anything more than peaceful words, contemplates an agreement which would be a cross between the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact—an intermarriage of the two with a somewhat mongrel offspring.

The people of the United States have definitely decided that they do not want to be a part of the League of Nations, and also that they do not want to "put teeth in the Kellogg pact."

The League of Nations has demonstrated its ineffectiveness as a peace league and its danger as a political despotism.

ON THE other hand, putting teeth in the Kellogg pact means putting bayonets in it.

And that means nothing less than the United States participating in European disputes and deciding them in the last analysis by force of arms.

Experience has proved, and is daily proving further, that without force of arms neither the League of Nations nor the Kellogg pact is effective as a peace league; but with force of arms these pacts cease to be peace pacts and become war pacts.

They would contemplate and would compel the intrusion of the United States into European entanglements, and the final decision of disputes by the arbitrament of war.

If both the League of Nations and the Kellogg pact, when sufficiently supplied with teeth, mean

WANTS EQUAL SECURITY, WILL SCRAP ARMY IF OTHER NATIONS DO

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

BERLIN, May 17.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler this afternoon announced Germany's acceptance of President Roosevelt's disarmament proposals in a speech to the Reichstag, marked by its conciliatory tone.

He agreed to proceed toward disarmament along the lines suggested at Geneva by Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain, whose disarmament proposals were recommended to the world yesterday by the American President.

Hitler said:

"Germany is sincerely thankful for the plan of President Roosevelt."

He further expressed willingness to accept the United States as guarantor of world peace under any new security arrangement.

The German Chancellor said:

"New wars, new sacrifices and new insecurity for Germany or its drowning in a Bolshevist chaos would cause unforeseeable crises.

"Germany wants to prevent forceful solution by sincere co-operation."

His speech contained two constructive offers:

First, to dissolve the entire German army and destroy all its arms if the other nations will do likewise.

Second, to co-operate with others in achieving disarmament through the Roosevelt, MacDonald, Mussolini plans, providing Germany is granted equality.

In the latter event, Hitler said, Germany is willing to reorganize her army within five years in accordance with the MacDonald program and dissolve her auxiliary police before the end of 1933.

BRIDE INJURED AS BUS, CAR HIT

Driving from the church where they were married today, a bride and bridegroom were victims of an automibel accident that sent the bride to a hospital. A bridesmaid also was injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sunseri were riding in a machine driven by a youth who said he was Mike Conrad, 24, of Reading, Pa. The automobile and a Homestead bus collided at South Twentieth and Sarah streets. The pair had been married at Epiphany Church, Washington street, and were to make their new home at 1319 Locust street.

Mrs. Sunseri, formerly Miss Gilda Villello, suffered lacerations of the left arm and shoulder. Her bridesmaid, Theresa Palermo, 22, of 422 Climax street, suffered rib fractures.

Conrad and the bus driver, Walter Gushak, Munhall, were charged with reckless driving. None of the three bus passengers was injured.

CAR LOADINGS SHOW BIG GAIN

The best news since December 1, 1931, in Pittsburgh's railroad circles, was a fact today with car loadings in the central region of the Pennsylvania Railroad for the first 16 days of this month 10 per cent ahead of the same period last year. Car loadings yesterday were the highest in a year and a half.

Cars received by the Pennsylvania from other lines increased 6 per cent for the week ending May 10 over the same week a year ago. And the rapidity of the car-loading increase is seen by its 16.5 per cent gain over the first 16 days of last month.

Indications of a possible resumption of car and locomotive building is seen in the purchase

Gandhi's Condition Held Satisfactory

POONA, India, May 17.—(AP.)—Doctors have found the Mahatma Gandhi, nearing the turn of a three weeks' fast against "untouchability," surprisingly well despite a weaker condition and a feebleness of voice.

"Very satisfactory," was the report of six physicians who examined him last night.

The Indian leader began his fast May 8.

U. S. Girl Engaged To Indian Prince

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(INS.)—The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Clara Seymour to the Indian Prince Mohammed Rashid, a lecturer on philosophy, was announced today.

Town Hall No Boudoir, Sleuth Jails Girls

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., May 17.—Because Burgess William Dick is determined the Town Hall will not be made in a ladies' boudoir, two young girls here still smart today from a severe reprimand.

The girls are Pauline Matsukaviez, 18, of East Vandergrift, and Annie Yucas, 17, a Vandergrift high school girl.

Before going to a dance they traded dresses. After the ball was over they decided to change back again, lest their parents raise inquisitive eyebrows. So they retreated to the deserted corridor of the Town Hall.

And no one would have been the wiser if Patrolman Emmett Foster hadn't wandered on the scene.

Foster found it most embarrassing, but he saw his duty quite clearly and, by heck, he arrested the girls and lodged them in jail.

After the scolding the Burgess sent the girls home.

Roosevelt 'Heartened' By Speech of Hitler

Opposition by Japan, France to Anti-War Pact Likely

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The conciliatory tone of Chancellor Adolph Hitler's speech to the Reichstag today rather surprised and gratified administration officials. President Roosevelt was "heartened" by its expression.

Washington had expected something more jingoistic.

As the President listened to Hitler over the radio, and made brief interpretations to those about him who did not understand German, his own ringing appeal for international peace and disarmament was under study in 54 world capitals.

In his dramatic and unprecedented step, Mr. Roosevelt asked the rulers of the world directly to enter into a solemn compace not to dispatch armed forces "of whatsoever nature" across frontiers, and to outlaw offensive weapons of warfare.

STUMBLING BLOCKS

Generally, the response is expected to be favorable. But it is recognized there are formidable barriers ahead of the plan, and that much diplomatic spade-work will be necessary to make it effective.

Japan, for example, is expected to "accept in principle," and then contend that conditions in China are so extraordinary as to put it outside the pale of the agreement. France is expected to "ac-

STOCKS SPURT ON 'GOOD NEWS'

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Stocks rallied in active trading today, many leading issues showing gains of $1 to more than $5. Commodity markets were also generally higher.

Wall street apparently took a favorable view of Chancellor Hitler's speech. The market was higher before excerpts from the address appeared on financial news tickers and then took another spurt, though the second advance got substantial stimulation from declaration of a regular $2.25 quarterly dividend by directors of American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Trade news was also cheerful. It included reports of further expansion in steel production and a gain in electric output over a year ago, as well as word that freight loadings of both New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads last week had topped 1932 figures.

Cotton was up nearly $1 a bale here, while wheat rose moderately.

At the time the message was sent, the Graf was flying over the mouth of the Gironde River in France. All aboard were reported well

FORBES FIELD, May 17.—Larry French, aggressive Pirate southpaw, loosened up to face the Phillies this afternoon in the third battle of the four-game series between the Buccos and the cellar occupants from Philadelphia. The Pirates won the first two games, and thereby held to the top position in the National League.

French lost a tough 11-inning fight to the runner-up Giants in New York last Saturday. He had the Giants 1-0 with two out in the ninth when they deadlocked the fight. Manager Burt Shotten, of the Phillies, is having a hard time finding a pitcher who can hold the Pirates. He had Rhem, Berly and Collins all ready for slab action today.

Traffic Lights Out, Police Kept Busy

Policemen were kept on the jump downtown today as traffic lights were turned off in part of the triangle district to allow repairmen to hunt "trouble" in the beacon light system. The beacons failed to flicker properly last night. Traffic was slowed slightly due to absence of lights today.

HITLER AGAINST NEW WAR BUT ASKS FOR ARMS EQUALITY

stantly defamed nation," Hitler expressed the hope the world would realize the justice of Germany's equality demands.

Hitler declared that complete equality with other nations need not be achieved by increasing her armaments.

He said:

"She is ready to dissolve her entire army and destroy her arms if the other nations will do likewise."

Hitler ascribed all of Germany's troubles and the woes of the world at large to the treaty of Versailles, which he said created new wounds instead of healing the old ones.

He lashed out at the security demands of France and the Little Entente powers. He said:

"France, Poland and Czechoslovakia have thousands of fighting planes, tanks and poison gases.

"Does not Germany have more right to demand security than her highly-armed, inter-allied neighbors?"

"She is ready to consent to co-operate, as reconstruction is impossible without disarmament.

"Germany is willing to agree to a five-year transitory period to reform her army in accordance with the MacDonald plan, if she is given equality when those five years have passed."

TRUSTS IN UNITED STATES

Germany, Hitler said, has no aggressive aims. He declared:

"She is ready to join in any new non-aggression pacts and to participate in a joint movement recognizing the United States as the guarantor of peace.

"eFar of German aggressions cannot be the reason for French and Polish armaments.

"Germany has no aggressive aims.

"She is ready to join in any new non-aggression pact. Germany is thinking only of security.

"But Germany will never ratify an agreement eternalizing her deformation. If attempts are made to force any such ratification, the world will find that Germany will not budge.

"Germany will not sign her own condemnation.

THREATS OF SANCTIONS

"Threats of sanctions will only lead to final cancellation of the treaties. Even then we would continue to insist upon our peaceful demands. Responsibility for the ensuing chaos would rest upon the authors of the sanctions.

"Any attempt to assault Germany would only be dictated by an intention to exclude us from the disarmament conference. We have character enough to draw the only possible conclusions if we were no longer welcome to Geneva. As a constantly defamed nation, we would no longer be a member of the League of Nations."

Hitler continued:

"Germany is willing to renounce her demands for offensive weapons if the other nations destroy theirs.

"Germany's one wish is for peace and independence."

CITES DISARM STEPS

Hitler called attention to the steps Germany has taken in behalf of disarmament, such as demilitarization of the Rhineland zone, limitation of the German army and navy and strict military control.

He said:

"The world is disrupted because it is divided into victors and vanquished.

"Germany's demand for disarmament for all is based first of all on moral reason, as disarmament in Germany must be followed by disarmament in other nations."

"Discrimination against a great people cannot last forever.

"The German people will live as have the French and Poles. No nation can have more understanding for newly-recreated nations than has young Germany."

SCORES TREATY

Speaking of the Versailles treaty, Hitler said:

"The Versailles treaty contains the germ of new conflicts.

"Germany will never ratify an agreement eternalizing her defamation. As a constantly defamed nation we would no longer be a member of the League of Nations.

"Since the treaty (of Versailles) was signed there have been 227,900 men, women and children suicides in Germany."

Germany's problems and those of Europe, he said, are largely economic.

He declared:

"Overpopulation in Western Europe and lack of materials comprise the chief source of troubles.

Instead of reparations, the peace treaties might better have given people a chance to live.

"It is unintelligent to deprive peoples of the possibility of living.

"It is absurd to crush the economic life of 60,000,000 persons, leading to catastrophe for all.

EXPORT DUMPING

"The policy of reparations developed in abnormal export dumping, resulting in the most serious crisis of modern times.

"The Treaty of Versailles put finance and accounting over economic reason.

"Germany has fulfilled her obligations to the point of suicide."

When a burst of prolonged applause had given him a brief rest, Hitler continued:

"Germany has willingly taken over obligations beyond the Versailles treaty, the Locarno pact and the Kellogg pact.

"What more obligations are asked?"

Hitler finished his address at 4:02 p. m. (11:02 a. m. eastern daylight saving time), with a fervent plea for world co-operation. He said:

"May the nations find a way to real understanding on the basis of equal rights."

The Reichstag immediately passed a resolution indorsing the Chancellor's announced foreign policies in full and then joined in singing "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

The former German crown prince, in full uniform; his son, Prince Louis Ferdinand, in civilian clothes, and numerous other dignitaries were among the prominent spectators in the opera house.

Also present was Prince August Wilhelm, youngest son of the former kaiser, who is an enthusiastic Nazi. He wore an ordinary Brown Shirt uniform, as did the solid block of Nazi deputies who occupied seats in the center of the historic opera house.

GERMAN DEBT STAND ALARMS

LONDON, May 17.—(INS.)—British financial circles were seriously perturbed today following receipt by the Bank of England of a telegram from the German Reichsbank outlining the German position regarding foreign debts.

The telegram stated the German foreign exchange position is so unfavorable and the question of transfer of funds for debt service so seriously affected that direct discussion with creditors is necessary.

The mesage requested British representatives to attend a discussion of the problem in Berlin May 26.

Financial quarters here interpreted the message as preparation by Germany for default.

PARIS, May 17.—(INS.)—Finance Minister Georges Bonnet today reiterated in the Senate that France has no intention of abandoning the gold standard.

OPPOSE SILVER RULE BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(INS.)—The State Department today directed its influence strongly against any action by the House to urge American delegates to the forthcoming world economic conference to work for world remonetization of silver on a 16 to 1 ratio to gold.

A statement from Dr. Herbert Feis, economic adviser of the department, was read before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Feis wrote:

"The Secretary of State would regret exceedingly if the Congress passed any legislation on the matter which tied the hands of the delegation and made it more difficult for them to achieve the best possible results."

BINGHAM URGES NATIONS' UNITY

PLYMOUTH, England, May 17.—(INS.)—Pleading for co-operation of Great Britain and the United States to promote peace and prosperity, Robert W. Bingham, new American ambassador to Great, Britain, arrived here today enroute to London.

Disembarking from the liner Washington, Bingham commended President Roosevelt's peace message in his reply to a welcome by the Mayor of Plymouth. The envoy said:

"We have got to recognize that we must bravely meet the grave situation confronting us. Our President really does seek peace. If we are to have world peace and prosperity in future, it depends on the co-operation of our two great nations."

GAS DISPERSES MILK PICKETS

RACINE, Wis., May 17.—(INS.)—Fifty National Guardsmen armed with tear gas today dispersed several hundred milk strikers who had gathered at the home of Allen Gifford, dairy company executive, to enforce their demands that a shipment of milk be dumped.

Tear gas bombs were hurled at the belligerents as the militiamen twice routed the mob. Seven pickets were arrested.

The state's milk strike appeared nearing a major crisis today as more than 1,000 National Guards acting as deputy sheriffs were sent into the field to combat pickets. The latter declared thousands of farmers would arise to close cheese factories, condenseries and creameries.

Adja. Gen. Ralph M. Immell concentrated his forces in two sectors—Shawano County in the North, and counties comprising the Milwaukee milk shed. Pickets also were massing in those areas.

Wheeling Man Wins $96,488 Coal Case

A verdict of $96,488.20, with interest since July 1, 1925, was awarded S. A. Williams, Wheeling, by a jury in Federal Court today. He had sued the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, alleging breach of contract.

Williams contended he sold the corporation, through an agent, 2,600 acres of coal in Brooks and Ohio counties, West Virginia, in 1924, and after delivering a portion of the tract the agent failed to complete the deal.

DAVIS CONFERS WITH FRENCH Ppremier

Daladier Calls U. S. Envoy as Hitler Ends Speech

PARIS, May 17.—(INS.)—The moment Chancellor Adolf Hitler finished his address in Berlin this afternono, Premier Edouard Daladier put in a telephone call for Norman H. Davis, special American ambassador, requesting an immediate conference. The two conferred for half an hour.

The French foreign office today pronounced President Roosevelt's appeal for world disarmament yesterday distinctly a move to check Germany. It professed to see nothing in Roosevelt's attack upon militarism as in any way criticizing France.

King George to Send Reply to Roosevelt

By HARRY K. REYNOLDS
International News Service.

LONDON, May 17.—Indicating the importance it attaches to the message, the British Empire will reply to President Roosevelt's world peace and disarmament plea through King George, it was learned today.

Inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt addressed his message personally to Britain's monarch, this country's answer will bear the royal signature and seal.

The British answer will express complete concurrence with the peace and disarmament principles enunciated by President Roosevelt.

It was learned that disappointment over failure of the message to announce American adherence to a consultative pact has now been assured by the hope Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large, will announce such adherence at Geneva.

Mussolini Pledges Italy's Full Support

ROME, May 17.—(INS.)—Although official comment was withheld, President Roosevelt's peace message was understood today to have the full support of the Italian government.

Reaction among government officials was favorable and newspapers deemed the plea for peace of sufficient importance to carry it in extra editions.

Officials hailed the message as following the lines Italy herself has pushed at Geneva regarding disarmament.

The proposal was welcomed by public opinion with deep satisfaction, and it was understood the government feels sincere appreciation over the fact that the message upheld points either proposed or indorsed by Italy.

LONDON, May 17.—(INS.)—An embargo on German goods as part of an international sanction under the League of Nations covenant was proposed in the House of Commons today.

Mander withdrew the bill after an appeal by Sir Austin Chamberlain, former foreign minister.

HITLER'S VIEWS PLEASE LEAGUE

GENEVA, May 17.—(INS.)—Chancellor Hitler's disarmament speech before the German Reichstag today was more conciliatory than had been expected, League of Nations leaders declared this afternoon.

It was pointed out that Hitler apparently not only is willing to accept international supervision of German armaments, but is willing to sign a non-aggression pact proposed by President Roosevelt, which is considered to be a distinct step forward.

Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference, told International News Service:

"What I heard sounded most hopeful to me, though I prefer to await the official text. Regardless of what Hitler says, Germany's attitude here in the future is more important."

FOREIGN TRADE BALANCE UP

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Foreign trade of the United States declined further in April to take exports to $105,000,000, as compared with $108,031,000 in the previous month, and imports to $88,000,000 from $94,859,000 the previous month.

The statistics announced today by the Commerce Department showed a favorable balance during April of $17,000,000 as compared to $8,573,000 in April, 1932. The April totals compared with exports for last April of $135,095,000 and imports of $126,522,000.

Japan, France Likely To Oppose Pact To Ban War

cept in principle" and then raise the question of French security, which has been the stumbling block of every international peace and disarmament movement since the Treaty of Versailles.

Literally applied, the Roosevelt formula would end offensive warfare, and "freeze" existing boundary lines where they now are. It would prevent the dispatch of puntitive expeditions such as the United States sent into Mexico in 1916, and the frequent dispatch of United States Marines into various Caribbean countries over a long span of years.

On one phase of the matter—and a most important phase—Mr. Roosevelt's message to the heads of the 54 nations and his later message to Congress were both silent. This concerned the matter of enforcement of the non-aggression pact. Nowhere in the messages was there any intimation of how it could be enforced.

PEACE PLEDGES BROKEN

The skeptics immediately pointed out that most of the powers to which the President addressed himself were already committed to approximately the same thing through their signatures to the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact. In that agreement the nations of the world "solemnly pledged" themselves not to go to war.

Yet the fact did not prevent Japan's running amok in China, nor did it operate to keep Paraguay and Bolivia from officially declaring war in South America after a year's unofficial fighting over the Gran Chaco territory.

If the United States, in subsequent negotiations, agrees to enter an international compact to enforce the terms of the Roosevelt proposal it will mark an epochal change in American foreign policy.

Japan's probable demand for reservations became known following a visit to the State Department of Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador.

Japan, it was said, will be unable to accept unconditionally certain parts of the President's proposal owing to the situation in Manchuria and South China.

DENIES SOVIET RECOGNITION

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(Universal.)—President Roosevelt declared yesterday his action in including Russia in his world appeal for peace could not be implied as constituting even technical recognition of the Soviet regime.

His message was sent directly to Moscow, the President said, because Russia was among the participating nations in the disarmament and world economic conferences.

The President's position was revealed at his press conference after leaders in Congress interpreted his move as de facto, or technical, recognition of the Soviet government.

Some went so far as to say it constituted a first step toward ultimate formal recognition.

It was the first time, however, since the Soviets overthrew Czarism in 1919 and established a communistic state that the United States diplomatically has admitted the Soviet government existed. For that reason, Congressional leaders read momentous significance into it.

JAPS ADVANCE, NEAR TIENTSIN

TOKIO, May 17.—(AP.)—While President Roosevelt was pleading for pledges that troops would not cross the boundaries of another country, the Japanese army, already holding 3,000 square miles of territory below the Great Wall in China, ploughed deeper into that country.

The difficulties of travel apparently were the only impediment today to four brigades advancing west of the Lwan River.

Japanese reports said Kaiping, 70 miles northeast of Tientsin, was occupied today. Chinese troops operating in that region of North China were said to be retreating through Tangshan, along the railroad toward Tientsin.

TIENTSIN, May 17.—(AP.)—An attempt was made today to assissinate Hwang Fu, representative of the National government at Nanking, by a Chinese who threw a bomb as Hwang arrived at the railroad station.

Ex-Crown Prince Leads Wild Cheers for Hitler

By WALTER DIETZEL
International News Service.

BERLIN, May 17.—The dynamic, forceful leader of the new Reich stood beneath the proscenium of Berlin's historic old Kroll Opera House this afternoon and called upon the world to look upon Germany's war wounds.

In his audience were the members of Germany's almost functionless parliament. Most of them were Nazis in brown shirts. But there were a few Socialists and Centrists and in the boxes and in special seats behind the rostrum were distinguished figures.

The former Crown Prince, his younger brother, August Wilhelm, who is an ardent Nazi, and Prince Louis Ferdinand were there as Hohenzollern patrons of the new reich. Behind the tribune were high officers of the army and navy. At their sides was Hitler's personal bodyguard, staunch fellows in black uniforms.

The former crown prince led the cheering for the Chancellor throughout the address. When he left he was saluted in turn by the Nazis. He shook hands with policemen and drove off alone in his roadster.

NAVY DIVIDED ON BLAME FOR AKRON LOSS

Court Holds Skipper's Error in Judgment Caused Crash

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Differences between a naval board of inquiry and high Navy officials over responsibility for the Akron disaster developed today after the board reported that "an error in judgment" by Commander Frank C. McCord "was a contributory cause."

The board held, however, that McCord should not be "condemned" because the knowledge available to him the night of the disaster might have "pointed to his plan of action being justifiable."

In a separate statement, concurred in by Secretary Swanson, Admiral William V. Pratt, Chief of Naval Operations, held that "no reflection should attach" to the commanding officer.

Pratt contended that the report was not "consistent in that it placed a degree of blame on McCord in one place and in another section said that his action at the time might have been justified."

The report was made public by the Navy Department as a joint Congressional committee selected Henry Breckenridge, of New York, as its counsel for an investigation of the airship disaster on April 4 in which 73 persons lost their lives.

AD CLUB HEEDS PROTEST ON ATHEISM

Exhibit Valued at $1,000 Loaned by National Group

Pressure brought to bear by ministers and others on the Pittsburgh Advertising Club today brought sudden withdrawal of four sacrilegious Russian atheists' posters from the club's annual exhibition in the William Penn Hotel's Chatterbox.

A wave of protest that promised to spread rapidly through Pittsburgh church circles began as the posters were brought to the attention of several ministers.

Rapid telephone protests brought quick action.

On one particularly distasteful poster appeared the card of Edward M. Power, Jr., president of the advertising agency bearing his name on which Power had written:—

"I object to the display of this kind of stuff."

ATHEIST PROPAGANDA

The posters are atheist propaganda reproduced from Moscow's publication, "Atheist at the Bench."

Removal of the pictures was a direct reversal in the earlier stand of the club's president, Robert F. Heywang, who had said:

"Well, we've got them in one corner of the hall—we'll take them into the other and set the mechanical eye in the Westinghouse exhibit to watch 'em.

"Then if one of the Russians comes out of the picture, we'll shoot him."

The posters are the property of the Advertising Federation of America, were loaned to the Pittsburgh club, are valued at $1,000. They were on large cards bearing other inoffensive posters centering around workers' propaganda.

EXHIBIT REMOVED

Because of the presence of the sacrilegious pictures on the cards, almost all of the Russian exhibit has been removed from the show.

Most vigorous of the protests, all made before the posters were removed, came from the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, of the Second Presbyterian Church. He said:

"That's decidedly sacrilegious. I can't think of anything more horrible than that. A lot of the men in the Ad Club are fine patriotic Americans and Christian gentlemen. I'm sure they'll remove the pictures.

"Certainly some things are to be held in reverence. The beginning of the ruin of any individual or nation is the loss of reverence. If we can't reverence Christ and have no feeling ourselves we should have respect for the feelings of other men."

SEES AIM DEFEATED

The Rev. Dr. H. Boyd Edwards, of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, however, wasn't much alarmed as he said:

"It'll just show people how utterly insane the whole business is and to what extremes these atheists will go."

The Rev. Dr. A. R. Robinson, of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, is ready to protest. He declared:

"If they're anything like they are described to me, I shall call up a number of my friends in the club and protest their being there. It sounds horribly sacrilegious to me."

Bishop Alexander Mann, of Trinity Cathedral, said:

"I don't particularly care to comment on the good sense or the good taste of men or women exhibiting things like this."

One of the mildest posters portrayed the lynching of Negroes, which it called the "highest expression of Christian bourgeoise." Another portrays Christ as a bootlegger.

AGNOSTIC APPROVES

A prominent agnostic, Attorney A. G. Smith, sees no harm in the posters. He says:

"Disgusting as they may be, these posters are undoubtedly exhibited as examples of advertising and illustrative work being done in Russia today. The people have a right to know what's going on there and the advertising club has the right to display the posters."

LAUGH UPSETS JELKE TRIAL

NEWPORT, R. I., May 17.—(INS.)—Mrs. Eugenia (Neenie) Jelke upset trial of the double-barreled divorce suit of herself and her husband, F. Frazier Jelke, in Newport Superior Court today when she laughed out loud during the testimony of a New York woman detective.

Mrs. Jelke's outburst came as Marie Kroemer, a woman detective for a New York agency, testified that Mrs. Effie Hartman, manager of a Birmingham (Ala.) apartment, "wanted plenty of dough" to testify in the case.

It was in Mrs. Hartman's apartments, according to testimony of witnesses for Jelke, that Mrs. Jelke was seen twice to enter a suite with a mysterious "southern major," as yet unnamed.

Clothes Pressing Deal Rejected By County

An offer which County Commissioner C. C. McGovern termed one of the best ever presented the county has been turned down. It was made by B. B. Slade, 2807½ Bedford avenue, who desired to establish a pants pressing and hat cleaning business in the county building. In return for room in the building Slade offered to press and clean twice a month, the uniforms of elevator operators, the building police and the county police.

In refusing the offer McGovern remarked in jest that it might have been different if Slade had included the trousers of the Commissioners in his offer.

COWARD FOILS 'KIDNAPERS'

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Four men who followed Miss Elsa Maxwell, society favorite, and Noel Coward to the Empire State Building were described by the Daily News today as would-be kidnapers, but the English actor-playwright said he believed they were only curiosity-trailers and meant no harm. Coward said:

"I should like to make it dramatic, but it isn't."

As related by the News, the four men, flashinly-dressed, followed Miss Maxwell and Coward into the lobby of the skyscraper, one of them saying:

"That's Coward. We'll wait until they come down."

Coward's chauffeur, noticing the four, told John Debrowen, the chief of the building's police guards, to round up his men.

The four men, seeing the guards mobilized, disappeared.

Coward said he was convinced they were the four who followed Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, co-stars in Coward's latest Broadway production, to their home Saturday night.

Lenore Will Divorce Her 'Lovely' Husband

Miss Ulric Through With Marriage for 'Ever and Ever'

Lenore Ulric, dynamic stage actress, announced today that she is through with married life "for ever and ever."

Her movie actor husband, Sidney Blackmer, she said, is "lovely and sweet," but she is going to divorce him just the same. She continued:

"Our marriage is tragic—it's nothing but a long distance, telegraph love. We are constantly separated, and marriage just doesn't mix with our professions."

Two years ago when she played opposite her husband here in the world premiere of "The Social Register," they were called a happy stage pair. Time has changed that state and their divorce case will soon be given court hearing.

Miss Ulric, who is now appearing in "Hard-Boiled Angel" at the Nixon Theater, has no personal grudge against married life. She believes every girl should marry as long as there is a "home life and companionship with each other."

She declared that there isn't a man in the whole world that can make her change her mind, and then emphatically added:

"I'll never marry again."

MEANS GUILTY IN LINDY PLOT

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Gaston B. Means, already under sentence of 15 years, today faced an additional two-year imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

With Norman T. Whitaker, "The Fox," Means was convicted yesterday by a District of Columbia Supreme Court jury of conspiring to defraud Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of $35,000 in a ransom hoax involving the kidnaped baby of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

It was expected today that their attorneys would file motions for a new trial and sentence may be postponed.

The jury returned its verdict in two hours and a half. The trial, lasting more than a week, was marked by the appearance of Col. Lindbergh and Means' story of what he swore were the actual circumstances of the Hopewell, N. J., kidnaping tragedy.

VETS REJECT FOREST JOBS

WASHINGTON May 17.—(AP.)—With but a few dissenting votes that were scarcely audible, the bonus marchers' convention today rejected the administration's offer of jobs in the forests.

The offer had been made to a committee of the 1,200 veterans in the capital to demand immediate payment of the bonus, by Louis M. Howe, one of the President's secretaries.

A committee immediately drafted a resolution to reject the offer and it was carried amid tumultuous cheering and stamping of feet.

The men then left the convention hall at the Washington auditorium and partook of sandwiches and coffee sent down from Fort Hunt, Va., where the government is providing free shelter and food during their stay.

DR. HIBBEN DIES IN AUTO CRASH

PRINCETON, N. J., May 17.—(AP.)—A stroke may have caused the automobile crash which killed Dr. John Grier Hibben, president emeritus of Princeton University, and critically injured his wife.

Dr. Hibben, who was 72, died yesterday afternoon when a motor car he was driving swerved into a beer truck near Woodbridge. Eye witnesses believed the educator may have suffered a stroke and lost control.

As messages of sorrow came today from many parts of the world, Mrs. Hibben lay unconscious in Rahway General Hospital with a fractured skull.

After the show the girl suggested to the boy that they go to his home and play. When she left the money was discovered missing. Because of the age of the girl the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will not publish her name.

Stage Comedienne Divorces Sam White

GARNER WON'T ATTEND FAIR

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Vice President Garner declined an invitation to attend the opening of the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, May 27, in a telegram today to Rufus C. Dawes, head of the exposition.

President Roosevelt, on deciding yesterday that he would be unable to make the trip, asked the Vice President to go.

Garner explained to newspapermen, however, that his presence in Washington was imperative while the impeachment trial of Judge Harold Louderback is in progress.

Presbyterians Renew Fundamentalist Row

COLUMBUS, O., May 17.—(AP.)—The old fight between fundamentalists and "modernists" will be renewed at the one hundred forty-fifth Presbyterian General Assembly here next week, it was definitely indicated today.

The presbytery of Philadelphia announced it would present an overture asking that the assembly elect to positions on the Board of Foreign Missions only persons who accept the conservative doctrines.

Anticipating factional discord on the floor, the Presbyterian Advance, a church weekly, has fired the opening gun in behalf of the opposing side by making the overture the subject of sharp criticism.

In an editorial, the Advance said the overture seeks "once more to override the constitutional rights and duties of presbyteries" by asking the assembly to designate the foreign misisons board "as a super-church court to determine for itself the doctrinal soundness of missionaries."

The overture holds that all missionaries should be "aware of the danger in which the church stands" and "insist upon such verities as the full truthfulness of Scripture, the virgin birth of Our Lord, His substitutionary death as a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice, His bodily resurrection and His miracles as being essential to the Word of God and our standards as being necessary to the message which every missionary under our church shall proclaim."

Oklahoma Pair Shares In Air and at Law

Joel C. Bates and his wife, Charlotte, both attorneys and both pilots, flew through Pittsburgh yesterday en route to Wilkes-Barre on legal business.

In Oklahoma City, their home town, they are Bates and Bates, attorneys at law, and a more up-to-date law firm in the air or on the ground never was.

In the air when Mr. Bates gets tired, his wife takes over the controls. In court should Mr Bates find the legal navigation a little too tedious, he can do the same.

They are partners in everything. Said Mr. Bates:

"My wife is just as capable a pilot or a lawyer as I am."

Said Mrs. Bates:

"We are partners in everything."

F. R. LAUNCHES GREAT JOB PROGRAM

operative movement, the President said:

"One of the great restrictions upon such co-operative efforts up to this time has been our anti-trust laws. They were properly designed as the means to cure the great evils of monopolistic price-fixing. They should certainly be retained as a permanent assurance that the old evils of unfair competition shall never return. But the public interest will be served if, with the authority and under the guidance of government, private industries are permitted to make agreements and codes insuring fair competition. However, it is necessary, if we thus limit the operation of anti-trust laws to their original purpose to provide a rigorous licensing power in order to meet rare cases of non-cooperation and abuse. Such a safeguard is indispensible."

NEW REVENUE NEEDED

As for raising the $3,300,000,000 for public works, Mr. Roosevelt said, in part:

"Careful estimates indicate that at least $220,000,000 of additional revenue will be required to service the contemplated borrowings of the government. This will of necessity involve some form or forms of new taxation.

"A number of suggestions have been made as to the nature of these taxes. I do not make a specific recommendation at this time, but I hope that the House Committee on Ways and Means will make a careful study of revenue plans and be prepared by the beginning of the coming week to propose the taxes which they judge best adapted to meet the present needs and which will at the same time be least burdensome to our people.

"At the end of that time, if no decision has been reached, or if the means proposed do not seem to be sufficiently adequate, or certain, it is my intention to transmit to the Congress my own recommendations in the matter."

of 260,000 tons of scrap material from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad by Weirton Steel Company. Fifteen thousand freight cars and 400 locomotives will be dismantled, it was learned.

Focal point of local steel interest is a tremendous order about to be let for an R. F. C. project, it was established today as reports of business upturn continued to reach here. Details of the construction allotment have not been released, but it was reported a large percentage of the order will go to a Pittsburgh firm.

Pig iron at Pittsburgh was boosted $1 a ton yesterday, and 50 cents a ton in the Youngstown area where steel ingot production reached 40 per cent of capacity for the first time in two years.

Thirty-nine of the 83 open-hearth furnaces in the Youngstown district are melting, and three or four Bessemer plants are running, according to reports.

PLANT CONSTRUCTION

Construction work on the plant of the Valley Mead Brewing Company at Meadville, Pa., will begin within two weeks, involving expenditure of $200,000, according to officials.

One hundred employes of the Dorman Mills Company, at Parsons, W. Va., are affected by the announced 5 per cent wage increase.

After being in complete idleness for two years, the Wegee mine was opened today at Shady Side, O., putting 50 men back to work, with prospects of 100 additional men being employed before the end of the week.

With 50 men returned to work yesterday at the Cambridge Collieries Company at Wheeling, W. Va., 125 more will be added within three days, officials stated. The mine had been idle more than two years.

tions upon such co-operative efforts up to this time has been our anti-trust laws. They were properly designed as the means to cure the great evils of monopolistic price fixing. They should certainly be retained as a permanent assurance that the old evils of unfair competition shall never return. But the public interest will be served if, with the authority and under the guidance of government, private industries are permitted to make agreements and codes insuring fair competition.

However, it is necessary, if we thus limit the operation of anti-trust laws to their original purpose to provide a rigorous licensing power in order to meet rare cases of nonco-operation and abuse.

Such a safeguard is indispensable.

The other proposal (2) gives the Executive full power to start a large program of direct employment. A careful survey convinces me that approximately $3,300,000,000 can be invested in useful and necessary public construction, and at the same time put the largest possible number of people to work.

Provision should be made to permit states, counties and municipalities to undertake useful public works, subject, however, to the most effective possible means of eliminating favoritism and wasteful expenditures on unwarranted and uneconomic projects.

We must, by prompt and vigorous action, override unnecessary obstructions which in the past have delayed the starting of public works programs. This can be accomplished by simple and direct procedure.

In carrying out this program it is imperative that the credit of the United States government be protected and preserved. This means that at the same time we are making these vast emergency expenditures there must be provided sufficient revenue to pay interest and amortization on the cost and that the revenues so provided must be adequate and certain rather than inadequate and speculative.

New Taxation

Careful estimates indicate that at least $220,000,000 of additional revenue will be required to service the contemplated borrowings of the government. This will of necessity involve some form of forms of new taxation. A number of suggestions have been made as to the nature of these taxes.

I do not make a specific recommendation at this time, but I hope that the Committee on Ways and Means, of the House of Representatives, will make a careful study of revenue plans and be prepared by the beginning of the coming week to propose the taxes which they judge to be best adapted to meet the present need and which will at the same time be less burdensome to our people.

At the end of that time, if no decision has been reached or if the means proposed do not seem to be sufficiently adequate or certain, it is my intention to transmit to the Congress my own recommendations in the matter.

The taxes to be imposed are for the purpose of providing re-employment for our citizens. Provision should be made for their reduction or elimination—

Dry Law Repeal

First—As fast as increasing revenues from improving business become available to replace them;

Second—Whenever the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment now pending before the states shall have been ratified and the repeal of the Volstead act effected. The pre-prohibition revenue laws would then automatically go into effect and yield enough wholly to eliminate these temporary re-employment taxes.

Finally, I stress the fact that all of these proposals are based on the gravity of the emergency and that therefore it is urgently necessary immediately to initiate a re-employment campaign if we are to avoid further hardships, to sustain business improvement and to pass on to better things.

For this reason I urge prompt action on this legislation.

Filled 'Tummies' Trap Boys in Warehouse

AMARILLO, Tex., May 17.—(AP.)—Many a boy has found that he could not fill his hand with cookies and then withdraw it from the cookie jar.

But it remained for a group of small boys in Amarillo to learn that after they had filled their "tummies" with hot soda water they could not crawl out of a warehouse through the hole which admitted them.

Police found the boys trapped inside the building, crying.

"They had shapes like brownies," remarked a cop who had read fairy tales.

WETS WIN ALL IN N. J. VOTE

NEWARK, N. J., May 17.—(AP.)—Unofficial returns on the election of delegates to the repeal convention indicated today that New Jersey's convention in June will have an attendance of 226 delegates solidly arrayed in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Sixty-four of these will be delegates-at-large.

The returns show every one of the 21 counties elected repeal candidates. Even counties traditionally held to be "dry," such as Cape May, Cumberland, Salem, Gloucester, Somerset and Hunterdon, favored the repeal candidates.

Car Rider Robbed Twice in 6 Days By Pickpocket

For the second time in six days a pickpocket robbed John Burgard, of 607 Taylor avenue, on a Brighton road street car last night. The thief stole his wallet, containing $37, police said.

While riding on a street car about the same time six days ago, Burgard was robbed of a wallet containing several dollars, he told police.

New Defense Filed In Altemus Suit

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—(AP.)—A new affidavit of defense was filed yesterday in behalf of Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman and her son, James Dobson Altemus, socially prominent Philadelphians, sued for $100,000 by Miss Estelle Maxwell on charges that Mrs. Eastman and her son prevented Miss Maxwell's marriage to Lemuel C. Altemus, from whom Mrs. Eastman was divorced in 1911.

The meeting will be held in the Homewood Carnegie Library auditorium, at Hamilton and Lang avenues, Thirteenth Ward, Homewood. Among the other speakers will be included Attorney Alexander P. I Can't Go On Wearing House Dresses Forever!

You know how you instinctively like some folks the first moment you meet them? The lady who made the statement above was one of that kind. She was big. Size 50½. But, whatever she weighed, there wasn't an ounce of sham or pretense about her. "What kind of dresses have you got for an elephant?" she added, with a twinkle.

We don't have such requests every day. But when we do, we believe in going a long way to make our customers happy. Much to her surprise and delight, we showed her six smart street dresses in her size. In return, we got a smile that beamed like a California sunburst.

We are firm believers in the theory that it is the little, extra, unusual courtesies and services that make a big store big. Maybe we're wrong about it. But for 19 years we've seen it work out right under our eyes!

CAFE MEN OPEN WAR ON BEER RACKETEERS

War on beer racketeers was declared by the Western Pennsylvania Restaurant Association which today moved to set up machinery to enforce the new state beer control law. Every member of the association will act as an investigator and report violations of the law to a paid secretary who will institute prosecutions, according to President Ross L. Gammon.

Mayor John S. Herron and District Attorney Andrew T. Park have promised their cooperation with the move to keep the beer business on a high level.

Decision to push prosecutions of violations, especially the sale of beer by unlicensed dealers, came as a result of a meeting of the association in William Penn Hotel last night, attended by Mayor Herron, Judge Ralph H. Smith, Mrs. Clara May Downey, of Washington, and Frank A. Willison.

BREWERS CO-OPERATE

President Gammon declared:

"It's either going to be a legitimate beer business or a racket, and we are going to work for it legitimately. We're treating beer as a food to be sold in restaurants and we don't want restaurants to become saloons. We have the co-operation of the brewers, the Mayor and the District Attorney. We should be able to keep it clean."

Not only will members of the association investigate the beer activities of non-members, but they will check their own membership for violations, Gammon said.

SEEK NEW MEMBERS

To enhance the control possibilities of the association's move, a membership drive is being carried on to provide large and effective representation in all parts of Western Pennsylvania beyond Allegheny County, the president announced.

Commenting on the return of beer, Mayor Herron said:

"We have seen less drunkenness in this city since beer came back."

Judge Smith warned against political corruption at one time practiced by organized liquor interests, advising:

"In seeking private profit we must not lose sight of public decency."

SUNDAY BEER CLUBS FORM

HARRISBURG, May 17.—(AP.)—Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, says he believes social clubs are being organized in Pennsylvania so that they can dispense beer to their members on Sundays.

The state beer control act, effective June 1, prohibits such sale.

The fee for incorporated clubs for a retailer's license is $25, while that for restaurants is graduated on a population basis from $75 to $300.

The District Attorney's office here explained that so-called "one-man-clubs" operated for profit will be considered illegal and subject to prosecution, as they were under the old Brooks law.

UNION LEADER'S HOME 'SHOT UP'

CHICAGO, May 17.—(AP.)—Bullets whizzed through the home of a leader of the insurgent group within the ranks of the Chicago Coal Teamsters' Union today, but, as in a similar attack at the beginning of the week, no one was injured.

Today's fire was aimed at James (Lefty) Lynch, business agent of the insurgents, led by George Roy Baker, who last week staged a brief overthrow of the officers of the union headed by John Sheridan, Jr., and Milton Booth, Jr.

Lynch appealed to the state's attorney's office for protection, and told police the bullets were fired from a machine gun in an automobile that passed his house.

C. N. Sickles, 42, of 505 Hawkins avenue, North Braddock, was pronounced dead in Braddock General Hospital today after he collapsed in a pedestrian tunnel at Port Perry. He was an employe of the Union Railroad. Death was probably due to a stroke, according to a morgue report.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

Every intelligent citizen knows that the country must be freed of racketeers.

Every patriotic citizen wants to help—and the patriotic citizens are numbered by the millions.

But they are unorganized—and because they are unorganized, their patriotism is ineffective.

What can these good citizens do? The Crusaders, who have declared relentless war on the racketeers, have answered that question.

Wherever racketeering exists, says Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, it exists in collusion with corrupt politics, which is itself a form of racketeering.

Good citizens, by mere force of numbers, can break this alliance by voting for LAW ENFORCEMENT at the polls.

For that reason, the crusaders are enrolling good citizens in their ranks from coast to coast—so these citizens may make themselves effective against the POLITICAL racketeers who enable the other racketeers, in so many instances, to thrive and cheat the law.

As the Crusaders themselves have said:

"Racketeering can be stopped only by a nation-wide drive of the most vigorous force by enrollment of scores of thousands of honest citizens."

It is every good citizen's DUTY to help berak the unholy alliance of politics and racketeering.

What are YOU going to do about it?

PERSIAKHAN RUGS

JOSEPH HORNE CO

Identical in Quality and Pattern with the Rugs that Eighteen Months Ago Were Responsible for the Most Exciting Sale Our Rug Department Ever Had.

$78

8x10-ft.—9x12-ft. Sizes

Persiakhans are made in Europe by a process which combines hand work with power weaving.

They have the same fascinating variation of colors and irregularity of pattern as the Persian rugs they duplicate.

Persiakhans are the nearest approach to true Orientals available and only an authority could distinguish them from antique Persian rugs.

Designs are woven to the back, the pile is deep and velvety, the lustre mellow and natural.

Everything that can be said about a fine Oriental Rug can be said about a Persiakhan.

People are still talking about that sale . . . about the crowds that thronged the department! Customers who bought Persiakhans can't say enough about their wearing qualities, their beauty, their wonderful value! Ever since that memorable event we've been asked time and time again, "When will you get more Persiakhans?"

And now the question is answered by the acquisition of 50 more of these superb rugs, which were obtained by us direct from the manufacturer at a price that provides a sale appeal.

The patterns and colorings are our own selection, so that you may be confident on this point. If the former response is any criterion, these 50 rugs will be quickly snapped up. So consider your rug needs tonight . . . and if you have use for a fine rug, see this group of fine Persiakhans tomorrow!

The latter broadcast will originate at a luncheon meeting of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, the League of Nations Association and the Commonwealth Club.

Mildred Bailey and her "Rockin' Chair" return to the air via WJAS tonight at 7 on a Wednesday-Friday schedule. Carlile will move to the Thursday spot, replacing Arthur Tracey, who is going vacationing, and Little's Friday period will be moved to 10:30 p. m.

The clash between conservative parents and their liberal-minded offspring, the result of the social revolution since the war, is the theme of a new weekly series of dramatic sketches, "One Man's Family," inaugurated on WCAE at 9:30.

Seals to Feature Hearst Rifle Awards

Ceremonies attending the award of the William Randolph Hearst rifle competition prizes to the Carnegie Tech team, which finished fourth in the twelfth annual collegiate competition this year, are to be broadcast from the studios of WCAE at 6:45 p. m. during the weekly Trained Seals program, scheduled tonight for half an hour.

Speakers include Capt. A. S. Ackerman, Corps of Engineers, professor of military science and tactics and commanding officer of the R. O. T. C. at Tech; Lieut. A. H. Burton, officer in charge of the rifle competition, and Sergt. R. Sommer, coach of the riflemen.

Helmut W. Buse, of Dormont, who tied with Don Cook, of the University of Washington, Seattle, for the national individual title, and his teammates, D. Ewing Irons, L. F. Dickson, C. M. Merriman and P. J. Mellinger, also are to be heard.

Harry Keck, Sun-Telegraph sports editor, presents the awards in behalf of Mr. Hearst.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

You can believe this one. Yesterday a $10 bill was blown out of a seventh floor office window in the Highland Building, East Liberty. Its owner wasted little time watching it fluttering in the breeze. He dashed for the elevator, then out on the sidewalk, and —no, he didn't get there before the money—but the money was still there when he arrived. Does this prove that there is no depression in East Liberty or that everybody as well as everything is looking up?

A picture and story of a fictitious shoe salesman was responsible for saving Mrs. M. F. Tully, of West Newton, from parting with a few dollars.

That was the same salesman who mulcted the police and firemen out of many half-dollar deposits. It might be news to them that Joseph S. Doyle, a representative of another shoe firm, is willing to forego his own commission in order to save the police and fire laddies from a loss.

Mrs. W. R. W., Aliquippa—The Home Finding Department of the Juvenile Court has very few children for legal adoption. If you are lonely for a child go down to Room 521, Courthouse. Ask to see Miss Crimble.

* * *

In England, a globe-trotter advises, locomotives are named for crack military units. For instance, the Royal Scot, soon to visit Pittsburgh on its way to the Chicago World's Fair, takes its name from the First Foot, the oldest regiment in the British Army.

Eric Stanford, 13-year-old Wilkinsburg lad, is proud of his letter from the president, acknowledging the receipt of a song written by Eric and dedicated to Mr. Roosevelt.

* * *

Thomas G. Houston, Valencia—So much depends on the condition of the coins that advice as to their value might be misleading.

Junior Patrol on WCAE Today

The Sun-Telegraph Junior Patrol program, proclaimed by Pittsburgh educators and parents as the ideal radio presentation for children, again takes the air via WCAE today at 4:45. Quin Hall, Sun-Telegraph cartoonist and Patrol Chief; Junior, Snuggins and Spike are featured, with the Herron Hill Junior High School orchestra, under the direction of C. V. Kelly, as the ensemble unit.

Speaking from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, relays the latest news flashes over WCAE-WJAS at 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m., and over WCAE at 9:05 a. m. daily.

Myrt, Marge May Stay Off Air

By AIRCASTER

The news of the day:

The unusual technique of drama writing revealed by "the case of Jane Doe," which was zipped off the air, has developed a new series by the author, Louis Joseph Vance—a revival, in the picturesque Arabian nights manner, of Vance's famous "Lone Wolf."

Vance removes the crime curse from the series by making his hero a detective who is a rehabilitated criminal.

The sponsor and "Myrt and Marge" are at loggerheads, following Myrtle Vail's accident which left her many scars and which incurred official displeasure, since she smashed up on a safety island.

A failure to renew the series this autumn won't surprise the sages of Chicago's radio world.

Waring Signs Berle

Milton Berle wins the comedians' handicap by signing up with the comedy section of Fred Waring's cigaret show after numerous auditions, in which dozens of allegedly funny men were sampled and proved as flat as a stein of stale near-beer.

Columbia network announces commercial novelty, on an intermittent summer schedule, beginning May 26, during which Amelia Earhart and Ted Husing will cover New York amusement center by plane with two-way conversations with back stage, night clubs and a voice atop the Empire State Building.

The Phil Spitalny client deserts the Friday night air with the broadcast May 26. Spitalny is holding the show intact and hunting for a patron.

Phil Baker's Friday night comedy has been extended for eight additional weeks.

Bert Lahr Leaves

The Sunday Rubinoff presentation now starring Walter C. Kelly and Bert Lahr, will not remain long in its present form, but will undergo within a few weeks a complete overhauling, with only the orchestra sitting pretty.

The mystery surrounding the identity of "The Phantom Gypsy" is no longer a mystery. Lou Raderman is the gent—although the first phanton gypsy was another guy—who flopped.

The heralded transfer of the famous Phil Harris Orchestra from Los Angeles to New York is a lot of Hooey. The Harris outfit has been signed by the National Broadcasting Company to go into Chicago's College Inn August 15.

Salvation Army Family on Air

Five members of the Smith family will be heard on the Salvation Army radio program tonight over Station WWSW from 9 to 9:30. Maj. Herbert Smith, who is second in command of the Army in Western Pennsylvania, will speak. Twins, Beatrice and Beulah, and their sister, Evelyn, will play cornet solos. Their brother, Ernest, will play the trombone on the radio half-hour.

HARRIS URGES REGISTRATION BILL VETO

Senator Frank J. Harris today wrote to Gov. Pinchot requesting that the Pittsburgh permanent registrtion bill, passed by the last Legislature, be vetoed. Harris said the bill, which he introduced, was amended in the House without his knowledge, to a point where it was worthless.

He wrote:

"These amendments so emasculated the bill that its original purpose has been destroyed, and, in the opinion of everyone interested in election reforms, as the bill finally passed it is less desirable than the existing law."

One amendment meeting disfavor provides that registration lists may not be purged less than 50 days before an election, but that names may be added until 30 days prior to the vote, and that registration commissioners must rely on police officers for investigations. Another objection is that the police officers must be residents of the districts in which investigations are made.

'PHANTOMS' PROTECTED

Personal service is demanded in the event of challenge to a registrant to strike off a name, a requirement which would be impossible in dealing with phantoms which had no existence.

Harris' letter in part follows:

"The purpose of this bill as it was originally drawn was to increase the number of persons participating in elections, to make it more convenient for qualified persons to vote by eliminating the inconvenience and necessity of annual personal registration on particular days, and by permitting a voter, once registered in a district, to vote at all elections so long as he remained in the same district and retained all the qualifications, without again having to appear personally to be registered.

"The bill, as originally prepared, contained vitally important provisions designed for the purpose of preventing fraudulent registrations. It provided for strict supervision of registration, ample time prior to a primary or election for full investigation of the registry lists for the detection of fraud, and ample authority for correction of the lists.

AGREEMENT REACHED

"At a meeting attended by the chairman of the Pennsylvania Elections Association, Mr. Alexander P. Lindsay, Mr. Albert Maris, who prepared the original draft of the bill; Mr. David L. Lawrence, representing the Democratic party of the state; Mr. Edward C. Boyle, attorney for the Pittsburgh Registration Commission, and Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, chairman of the sub-committee on elections, a very definite agreement was reached on the provisions of the bill, and all concerned seemed very well satisfied.

"However, many amendments were made to the bill in the House, without my knowledge, and when the bill as amended was sent back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendments, I refused to sign the Conference Report, and Senator Mansfield and I protested against the amendments.

"The bill as introduced was designed to facilitate voting and prevent fraud, but by amendments to important provisions it is now of such nature that it would lay the way open for the commission of fraud to an even greater extent than under the present law.

"It is my opinion these amendments were made intentionally to destroy the desired effect of the bill. A committee is now at work to determine who was responsible for the amendments and if there was any improper motive on the part of those responsible for the changes. The result of this investigation will be made public."

the participation of the United States in the wars of Europe, how is the mongrel offspring of the mismated pair going to mean anything different?

As soon as we regard the practical working of the Roosevelt proposition, we come flat against the stone wall of these hard facts.

Who is to decide which nation is the aggressor?

And what is to compel the aggressor to cease his aggression?

THE ANSWER to the first question obviously is that a controlling number of more or less prejudiced, and more or less directly involved foreign nations, will decide this serious question, largely from the viewpoint of self interest and political partisanship.

And the answer to the second question is that the only way that such a decision can be made effective is to control, or endeavor to control, the action of the indicted nation or group of nations by force of arms.

This means nothing but another world war, in which the United States this time would necessarily be involved not by a deliberate judgment and through the exercise of its own free will, but by its definite adherence to the league or pact, and the fulfillment of the obligations inevitably incurred.

Stripped of the fuss and feathers of fine words and confusing phrases, the question for the American people to decide is simply this:

What does the United States desire for ITSELF?

Does it want peace or does it want war?

If it wants war, then let it involve itself in European entanglements.

If it wants peace, then let it keep free from foreign entanglements as George Washington enjoined.

LET IT keep the faith with the fathers of the Republic.

Let it keep the peace at home, and devote itself to proving to the war-stricken world the benefits to be derived, in progress and prosperity, in wealth and happiness, from practicing peaceful policies and pursuing the paths of peace.

Let us hope that Mr. Roosevelt's proposal means nothing but helpful words of sound advice to Europe without participation in their endless wars.

Otherwise, it may mean the loss of peace and returning prosperity here at home, and the involvement in unfathomable disaster of this great country of ours, which should securely remain the leader in peace and progress, in liberty and enlightenment, for all the world.

Suspect Captured In Five-Block Chase

Kenneth Logston, 23, of 508 Kirkpatrick street, was arrested by Center avenue police early today following a five-block chase after one of a group of three men hurled a brick through a window of the Lena Diznoff hardware store, at 842 Center avenue, police reported. Police were attracted to the scene by falling glass.

FIREMEN BACK OUSTED CHIEF

The Dravosburg volunteer firemen - councilmanic rift widened last night when the firemen, flouting desires of Council, reaffirmed Charles Thomas as their fire chief.

Thomas was suspended and later dismissed by Council after he is alleged to have turned in a false alarm. Assistant Chief John Sargent was named to succeed him.

The fire company, owners of the fire truck, ignored Council's action. Council, who pays the chief's salary, gave firemen 10 days to hold an election. Yesterday they re-elected Thomas.

A benefit carnival to help meet payments on their partially paid for truck is being held this week by firemen in Mifflin Township, because, they say, they were refused a permit in the borough.

12 Women Jurors Give $2,000 Verdict

A jury of 12 women awarded Mrs. Rose Denawetz a verdict of $2,000 for injuries to her hand, suffered while she was a passenger in a taxicab of the Pittsburgh Transportation Company.

She charged the cab swerved at Brady and Twenty-second streets and she was thrown on the floor. The case was tried before Judge James H. Gray.

THREE BANDITS TAKE CASH BOX

An armed bandit trio invaded the salesroom of the Pitt Auto Gear Company, 3310 Penn avenue, and escaped with a strong box containing $35 last night.

Henry Cabman, the night manager; Richard Henning, a watchman, and James Mallon, a friend of Cabman's, were forced into the rear of the room by the bandits. While the two held them at bay, an accomplice picked up the strong box. They escaped in an automobile.

George R. Quinn, of 2245 St. Luke's square, fought off two Negro bandits, one of them armed, who attempted to rob him in Lafayette avenue early today, North Side police reported. The pair fled when Quinn, ignoring their command to "stick 'em up," lunged at them.

Union Agent Sues For Reinstatement

John W. Boyles, 472 Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, has brought mandamus proceedings against W. A. Crissman, president of the Pittsburgh District Council, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, demanding reinstatement as a member and return of $70 in fines. He also claims $66 a week as business agent from October 4, 1932.

Several similar actions by other members, resulting from suspensions, are pending before the court.

West Virginia Boy Student Sought Here

Police here have been asked to aid in the search for Frank Merenda, 15, of Hollidays Cove, W. Va., who disappeared from home last Thursday, while on his way to Follansbee High School, where he was a student. The boy's description was broadcast throughout the city at the request of his father, Charles Merenda.

FLYING THEORY TAUGHT AVIATION STUDENT

Airport Instructor Explains Control Of Plane

WIN YOUR WINGS
Installment No. 3.

The following morning Bill arrived at the airport betimes. In his pocket was the coveted student permit, and he made his way with an air of assurance towards a building marked "School of Aviation—Federal and State Approved." As he approached the building one of the instructors came out, and catching sight of him called:

"Good morning! Is there anything I can do for you?"

"I think so," replied Bill, "I want to take a pilot's course."

"Fine," said the instructor. "Come on inside, and we will get you fixed up. By the way, have you got your student permit?"

"Right here," answered Bill, producing from his pocket a small blue card bearing the local Department of Commerce doctor's signature.

"We'll fix you up on a contract then right away, and have you in the air in no time. Better start off with a solo pilot's course, and then you can get your limited commercial and transport extensions as you come to them."

"That sounds reasonable," said Bill.

In a few moments the contract was signed, and the two made their way towards a trim little biplane.

"Know anything about flying?" asked the instructor, Jack Miller.

"No," admitted Bill.

"Okay, then let's start at the beginning. An airplane flies because the air striking the under surface of the wings pushes them upward. The front edge of the wing simultaneously pushes the air flow up over the top surface of the wing, causing a partial vacuum or low pressure area. Thus there is a push upward on the lower side and a pull upward on the upper side.

"Obviously, the faster the plane goes the greater the pressure underneath and the more vacuum there is on top, and, consequently, the more lift you have. That's why it's so important to keep up your 'flying speed.'

"To control the plane there are hinged flaps in the wings known as ailerons. By pushing the control stick in the cockpit to the left, for instance, you bend this flap up. As a result the low pressure on the top surface is turned into a positive pressure downward, and the positive pressure area on the lower surface is turned into a low or negative pressure.

"The result is that the wing is forced downward. As a matter of fact, ailerons are made so that when you tip one up you automatically tip the other down, which means that at the same time you push one wing down you bring the other one up. That's how you keep the plane on an even keel.

"If you want to make it go up or down you pull the control stick back and push it forward. That tips the flaps on the tail surfaces. Just like the ailerons when you tip them up it forces the tail down, which puts the plane in a climbing position and vice versa. To steer you use the rudder just like a boat."

"I think I understand," said Bill. "If you want to tip the plane to the right you push the control stick to the right, and to the left to tip it the other way. You pull back on the stick to climb, and push forward to come down, and work the rudder bar like a boat."

"Right you are," replied the instructor. "Now we are all set. Here, get into this 'chute and let's try it."

'Bill' Made Ready For Practical Lessons

Answer These Questions

4—How many hours of solo flying are necessary to become a private pilot?

5—What is an "approved school" of aviation?

CAR COMPANY'S HEAD ASSAILED

Appointment of Frank N. Hoffstot as one of the receivers of the Pressed Steel Car Company, of which he is president, was attacked in Federal Court yesterday by Attorney Louis Karasik, of New York.

The attorney, presenting a petition from Alma Pollock, of New York, a bondholder, before Judge R. M. Gibson, asserted Hoffstot was unfit to act as a receiver. He said Hoffstot and members of his family drew large salaries, while pay of other employes was decreased. Hoffstot refused information to stockholders, the lawyer said.

Attorney Mayard Teall, counsel for the company, opposing the petition, said that under Hoffstot's management the company has paid dividends of over $30,000,000. The company has handled 20 per cent of the railroad car business of the United States, he said.

Further hearing will be held May 25.

Contest Rules

The rules of the "Win Your Wings" contest follow:

The Sun-Telegraph will publish in 12 installments the serial "Win Your Wings," the experiences of a student pilot. Three questions relative to aviation subjects will be printed each day, the answers to each being contained in some previous installment.

Read each day's installment and answer the questions. Thirty-six questions must be answered. When your list of questions and answers is complete, send them to the "Win Your Wings" Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, together with an essay of not more than 250 words on "Why I Want to Fly."

Questions and answers must be accompanied by essay.

TEN PRIZES

Winners will be selected as to largest number of correct answers and merit of essay. In case of ties duplicate awards will be given.

Passenger flights to various cities as designated are optional.

HONOR HIGHWAY BEAUTIFIER

Mrs. J. G. Pontefract, Sewickley society woman, who has spent much time and money beautifying the Ohio River boulevard slopes, has been honored for her work by the County Commissioners, who yesterday voted to name a portion of the hillside in Glenfield Borough "Pontefract Terrace."

The resolution was adopted at the suggestion of Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, after it had been presented by the Planning Commission.

Mrs. Pontefract has spent large sums for shrubs and trees planted along the hillsides, and also to prevent the erection of signboards. Recently she had poison ivy planted to prevent trespassing and sign erection.

DENNY DEFENDS APPOINTMENTS

Harmar D. Denny, Jr., director of public safety, issued a statement late yesterday explaining the appointment of 15 detectives made Monday.

The statement reads, in part:

"All of the recent Detective Bureau appointments were made after careful investigation and in compliance with the merit system of advancement outlined when I took office."

Joseph Foster, Denny explained, was appointed after receiving the same scrutiny as the other men.

Foster was arrested by Federal agents when they seized 33 bottles of Canadian ale several years ago in the building in which his restaurant was located. He was later discharged, Denny said, when it was shown that Foster did not own the ale.

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 15, 1933

Time and again I am told——by my own organization and by others——that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives——he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,——all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car——but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"——the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

ORGANIST WIFE FAILS IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Judge Frank P. Patterson yesterday refused a divorce to Minnie Gable, 28, a Kedron street musician, who charged that her husband, Harry R. Gable, prevented her from arriving at church in Pitcairn in time to play the organ.

The court found that her charge of cruelty and indignities were not sustained in the instances mentioned. The ruling said there was evidence of desertion, but that it was too soon to maintain that charge.

Judge Patterson, who has been advising lawyers that divorces cannot be granted unless charges are sustained, said a charge of desertion could be brought by Mrs. Gable after two years' separation.

Leroy R. Gurley, 2866 Espy avenue, Dormont, who charged his wife was unduly jealous, was refused a divorce from Marguerite Gurley, Hollidaysburg, by Judge George V. Moore. The court found that Gurley did not sustain his charges of cruel and barbarous treatment or indignities.

ONE PAY RAISE DENIED, 2 GIVEN

Press Anderson, South Park custodian, was denied a salary increase yesterday. Park Director A. M. Marion asked a $25 a month advance for Anderson in what he termed equalization of park salaries, but Commissioner W. D. Mansfield declared against any increases.

Anderson's pay will remain $175 a month. He spent all of last year in North Park as special representative of the Commissioners and was paid $300 a month. His duties were to search for a swimming pool site. The Commissioners a moment later raised the salary of the North Park custodian.

Apparently this was an oversight, as the Commissioners had agreed to approve all salary changes with the exception of the increase for Anderson, which they believed to be the only raise on the list.

The North Park custodian is paid $175. Marion had sought the same increase for this position as for Anderson's. The pay of the transitman in North Park also was jumped from $132 to $150 monthly. Salaries for four South Park jobs were cut $5 monthly, in consideration of quarters furnished the workmen.

BAKER SCORES COMPETITION

The stage has been reached in industrial development when competition "must be replaced by some other guiding principle," Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president, Carnegie Institute of Technology, told the Association of Mine Inspectors at their annual dinner in the Hotel William Penn last night.

Competition must be nationalized and a certain amount of cooperation should be maintained between competing companies, Dr. Baker averred. He continued:

"It would be too much to hope that the recent decision of the Supreme Court will immediately restore the coal business to its former state, but it holds out the prospect of great improvements in the carrying on of the coal business."

KIDNAP THREAT SENT RICH MAN

TUCSON, Ariz., May 17.—(INS.)—Threatened with kidnaping unless he pays $40,000 to Cleveland gangsters, John Parker Hale Chandler, wealthy resident of Portsmouth, N. J., and Daytona Beach, Fla., today asked Tucson and Cleveland police to help him trace the extortion messages.

Chandler revealed that recently he had received unsigned telegrams and letters from Cleveland. He was ordered to send the money to a Cleveland hotel. Tucson detectives said they thought the messages were the work of enemies trying to harass him.

Chandler was the target a month ago for the fire of a submachine gun as he was leaving a downtown hotel. He escaped uninjured.

FRANK & SEDER BIRTHDAY

TELL IT TO ELSIE

-:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:-

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Perfect Freedom for Engaged People Is Unwise

How much freedom should engaged folks have?

Yes, I know. This is 1933—not 1883.

But even so, is it Okay for them to spend week-ends together with no chaperon?

And is "Perplexed" being just an Old Fogey when she objects to daughter doing that?

S'pose she'd written this to you?

Dear Elsie Robinson:

Would you please play arbitrator in a matter that we cannot all seem to see in the same light in our home? I know that you know these modern youngsters and you also know humans generally, so I believe that you will give me an answer that is according to good sense.

My daughter, who is 20, considers herself engaged to a young man of 25. He is at present unemployed. She likes to spend week-ends at his home. His family consists of his mother, his sister and himself.

The mother works every night, so she cannot be at home with the young people when my daughter is there. The young folks have quite a bit of company and no doubt have very happy times together.

I think the boy and his family are fine, honorable people; but still, I don't think that it is a good thing for the young folks to be alone together so much, or for my daughter to spend the night at their house when the mother is not home.

QUESTIONS WISDOM

Am I being too old-fashioned when I look at things this way? My daughter, I am sure, thinks I am.

Is that true, or are the young folks being too "modern?" I know that they have more freedom nowadays than they did when I was young, and that a great many people think it is perfectly all right. But what do you think? Is it wise, to do as my daughter is doing?

PERPLEXED.

Are you being "too old-fashioned;" and is it perfectly all right for youngsters to enjoy perfect freedom when they're engaged?

No, my dear; you're not, and it isn't.

Sure—they're probably perfectly honorable, decent kids; and they may never come to any actual harm.

But it all boils down to that old game, "what he said, what she said—and what the world said;" and even in 1933 the world is apt to say plenty.

SAME AS EVER

After all, is the world so far off its reckoning? Let's face facts frankly. There have been plenty of changes in the last few hundred years, but the old established business of love is still going on, on the same old corner. Nor has its tempo or temperature moderated one particle, with all our sophistication.

Nature still doesn't give a hoot for convention when she gets two young things in her grip—

And society still has precious little use for an illegitimate baby or its mother, despite all the fine talking.

All of which I'm not indorsing. Some day we humans will give Life a better break. But that's the Status Quo today—and the girl who tries to buck it is just wishing 57 varieties of Hard Luck on herself.

So pass that on to Daughter for me, Mother. And tell her, if she's got brains, to use them—or else hire a keeper.

Happy Marriages and the Other Kind Discussed by Fay King

GEE! EVERYBODY I KNOW IS GETTING MARRIED! GUESS I'LL MARRY TOO!
A HAPPY MARRIAGE SHOULD LAST A LIFETIME!
NEVER MARRIED!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Countless happy marriages last a lifetime. Such marriages are an ideal state, but we hear and read little about them.

But countless foolish marriages are made which must end disastrously. Mercenary marriages. Spite marriages. Elopements to startle friends. Marriages for ambition. Marriages just to avoid the "stigma" of remaining unmarried.

It seems to me that it is much more creditable to never marry than to marry for less than love. Anyone can marry, if one will marry just anyone.

Countless interesting, attractive and desirable persons, both men and women, have gone through life without ever marrying. Often because they are more romantic, idealistic and sincere, than others who seem to consider marriage hardly more than a convenient contract with a cancellation clause—called divorce.

Madge Gives Gangster Her First Name

In a flash I realized that I could temporize no longer. I saw that plainly as I heard the impatience in Nick's voice when he asked me if I were making up a "phony moniker." I must give him a name and convince him that it was mine.

"I do not understand what you mean," I said icily. "I am not ashamed to give you my name I have done nothing wrong."

"At-ta-girl, Baby!" Nick responded. "I like 'em high and mighty. And now that you've got that out of your system, get the name out, too."

"My name is Madge Adams," I said, hoping that it sounded plausible. "The young girl I'm hunting—"

"One at a time, Baby," Nick said, and Tony grunted out something that sounded like "Got it!" He was taking down the names! I was sure of it, though I could not see him, and I thanked my particular little joss for the premonition that had come to me, resulting in my changing our last names while keeping the first ones.

"The girl's name is Marion Southey," I went on, stopped at a command from the rear seat.

"Spell it," Toney growled, and I obeyed him. Then, emboldened by his patent unfamiliarity with the names of English poets, I gave Donald's name as Cowper, adding a timid. "Have you decided yet what it is best to do about trailing this man, Owen? If you can't help me, will you let me get out and go on, thanking you for this much aid?"

WON'T PASS PLACE

"Who said he weren't going to help you, Baby?" Nick demanded, and while my hope of rescuing Marion revived, I shivered at his unctuous caressing utterance of "Baby." But Nick was speaking again, and I forced myself to attend to his words and to nothing else.

"There's no need for hurry," he said. "Either this bird—Owen, did you say?—has stopped at Jerry's, or he hasn't. If he hasn't it's just too bad; for we're not going past Jerry's front gate—not just two of us. You'll have to trace your lad some other way.

"But, the way the cards lie, he's probably there now, and if he is he'll lie low for awhile. Nobody'll bother him at Jerry's. It's a swell hide-out.

"He may want to change cars there, or the girl may have fainted or something, and need care. Jerry always has a woman or two ready to cake care of bawling babes. Then again, he may have spotted that lad on the back—what did you say his name was?"

"Ronald Cowper." I said faintly, and nick went on.

"It'll be Ronald Mud if that guy Owen spots him," he said with a chuckle. "Anybody that trails along with Jerry hasn't much use for spies. They drill 'em first and ask questions afterward."

I found myself shaking as with a chill, and put forth all my will power in the effort to hide it and say nothing. Speech of any kind from me was useless in the present crisis. I could only listen, and pray silently.

EXPLAINS PLAN

"There's just one thing we can do," Nick said reflectively, and my pulses bounded at something new and purposeful in his tones, "and that is to cut around and wait for your friends on the other road. There's a back way out of Jerry's that hardly anybody knows about, and you can bet that Jerry don't know we know where it is. It comes out on a blind road quite a ways from here—a swell place for a getaway.

"There's a place I know that heads in to that back road, where we can stand 'em on their heads if we get there first. So we'll just turn around and cut along to it. Didn't I tell you, Baby, I'd help you out?"

"Yes, and thank you so much," I managed to get the words out with a tremor. Then my voice broke.

"Won't you please go down a little nearer, and let me steal close and see if I can see Ronald? I am sure he would slip off and hide if he felt the car slowing up. But he won't know what to do or where to go after that, and I'm so afraid he'll follow the car and fall into the clutches of this man Jerry."

"You'll not get out of this car," Tony said furiously.

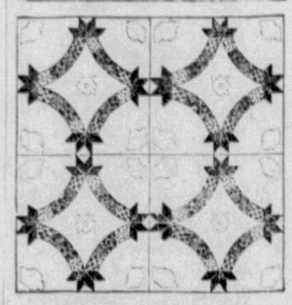
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



Friendship Knot No. 410.

By LAURA WHEELER

Many poems and lovely sentiments have been written about friendship, so this quilt, the Friendship Knot, just adds another way of expressing it. Names of this type abound in the old quilt patterns, and we today feel that they express the simple sincerity of the women who made and named them. The Friendship Knot is an especially charming pattern that is deservedly popular. The patches that join the knots offer an unusual opportunity for interesting color combinations as well as the possibility of using up scraps of materials. The small quilting motifs at the center and corners of the block add much to the beauty of the quilt.

The pattern comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, quilting motif, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for a pattern for this design to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

-:- Correct Manners -:-

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Serving Coffee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a bride-to-be informs one of her completed plans for her wedding, is it necessary to extend best wishes to her, when this has been done upon her engagement?

2—Is it correct to use lighted candles on the table for informal luncheons and dinners, or only for informal dinners and teas?

3—When are demi-tasse cups used? Are they only used after dinner, or can they be used any time during the evening or in the afternoon? R.

1—It would be natural, when you respond to her news that she has completed her plans for her wedding, to tell her again of your best wishes for her. It isn't necessary to do this formally, of course, but brides-to-be naturally expect a world of enthusiasm about the progress of their happy plans.

2—It is correct, and oh! how charming, to use lighted candles on our tea tables, and on our dinner tables, both formal and informal. But, unless we need them because our dining-rooms are dark and must be lighted at luncheon-time, we do not use candles on luncheon tables.

3—We may use the small coffee cups at any time when they seem to us to be appropriate. That is, they are usually used at luncheon parties, formal or informal, whether the coffee is served at the dining-table or in the living-room. They are used after dinner, of course, and may be used at teatime, if wish to serve coffee. However, at teatime we may use the teacups for coffee, or offer the choice of a small or large cup.

The small cups may be used also at supper parties, or at buffet parties. It is a nice detail, at teatime or for supper or at buffet parties, to offer both sizes of coffee cups, just as many hostesses now offer coffee and a coffee substitute—the later for those who "can't drink coffee late at night."

Gift Not Required

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—A young man who works with my boy friend is to be married very soon. He sent an invitation to my friend addressed as follows: "Mr. W. Smith and Friend." As I have never met this young man, or the bride-to-be, should I send a gift? My friend is well acquainted with both of them, and I am wondering if it would be all right if we send one present from both of us?

2—What should I say when I am introduced to them?. I do not want to make any mistakes, and your advice will be appreciated. A. B. C.

1—It wouldn't be necessary for you, in this case, to send a gift, but if you wish, it would be quite correct—some very simple gift that would register your friendliness and appreciation of the invitation. I'd rather have you send a separate gift, if you decide to send one.

2—To acknowledge these or any other introductions, say "How do you do." Then, after you have made this acknowledgment, you might say to the girl, "May I offer you, please, my very best wishes for your happiness, always?" To the young man say, "And please let me offer you my heartiest congratulations."

Contract Bridge -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

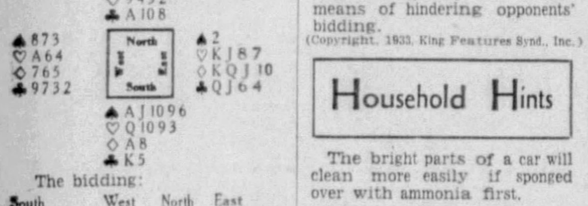
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Doubling Too Soon

There are bridge players so anxious to play against the opposing contract and to exact penalties from their opponents that they do not wait for them to reach their natural contract before interposing a penalty double, but interpose it at some such bid as five-odd of a major, which is, generally speaking, practically a guarantee of the success of such a contract and an expression of the view that if the other member of the partnership holds just a little more than he has shown, a Slam is possible.

Mr. James Magner, Jr., of Boston, disclosed one of the reasons why he is ranged as one of the best Contract players in that city through the manner in which he played a redoubled contract of five on the hand below:

South, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠ (1)	Pass	Pass	Double (2)
Redouble (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The five-spade bid was somewhat optimistic. South had not much more than an opening bid.

2—The Double by East, after South had invited a Slam, is one of the features of the hand. He actually took only 1 trick and his partner took one more.

3—As a matter of course. Having bid five spades, South might just as well redouble, as he had much more to gain than to lose by it.

West's opening lead was the heart Ace, and the suit was continued, his partner winning the second trick with the King. A diamond now was led, Mr. Magner winning the King with Ace. Four rounds of spades followed, East choosing as discards a heart, a club and a diamond. Mr. Magner could have ruffed a heart and then attained the same result. South's next lead was the heart Queen, which dropped East's Knave. The heart Ten forced the discard of the diamond Knave from East, and when Mr. Magner laid down the spade Ace, East could no longer defend the hand. If he decarded a club, Dummy's clubs would be good. If, instead, he discarded the diamond Queen, the 8 in Mr. Magner's hand would become a trick winner.

The result of careful play, plus the information afforded by the unwise double, was that Mr. Magner made his redoubled contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You are third hand after two passes. What do you bid, holding:

♠ A Q J 8 4 3 ♡ 2 ◇ K 8 6 2 ♣ 7 3

Answer—One spade. A third hand semi-psychic in this position is frequently an effective means of hindering opponents' bidding.

Household Hints

The bright parts of a car will clean more easily if sponged over with ammonia first.

A piece of carpet on the treadle of the sewing machine is easier on the feet of the seamstress if much stitching is to be done.

A wooden box outside the kitchen door with a lid on hinges, is a splendid little house for the milk until you arrive downstairs to take it in. It keeps it clean and out of the sun or stormy elements until you place it in the refrigerator.

Dust will be prevented from getting on the food, while free air circulation will be permitted, if you insert a piece of cheesecloth in an embroidery hoop and place it over a dish set outside to cool. The hoop prevents the cloth from touching the contents and from being blown away.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The woman who has suddenly started to count her calories with the idea of lessening her bulk must watch out that dieting doesn't sag facial tissues. During her period of figure improving, let her not neglect to ply a heavy skin food every night, skip over it with an ice cube, use an astringent faithfully every morning. No use getting a new shape if the face is to look older.

Instead of flat curls at the rear of the chic coiffure, the smarties are wearing puffs, especially if the chapeau is worn well forward and the rear of the head is out in the public eye. When the hair has had a permanent wave, moisten it strand by strand, roll on a cylinder of paper, pin securely. When the curls are dry, brush over the fingers. There you are.

NEUTRON TOPIC OF SCIENTISTS

PASADENA, Cal., May 17.—(AP.)—Neutrons were the topic of discussion today in the conference of famous physicists seeking the secrets of life.

It was the mission of Prof. Charles C. Lauritsen, of x-ray fame, to discuss experimental evidence of the neutron. No scientist has ever seen a neutron and all those who know about neutrons are confident no person ever will see one.

This is because the neutron is just one of the small mystery particles that are found in the makeup of atoms. In fact, says Dr. Lauritsen, the neutron is estimated to be about one-millionth the size of the smallest thing that man's most powerful microscope will ever bring into view.

COURT FREES 12 IN RANKIN CASE

Thirteen of 25 original defendants cases remained on trial today before Visiting Judge S. L. Reed, of Cambria County, charged with attempting to take the Rankin High School by storm the night of April 12, to hold a meeting of unemployed.

Arresting officers were unable to identify 12 of the defendants and on motion of Assistant District Attorney Chauncey Pruger they were freed on directed verdicts.

Valentine Delle Done, alleged leader, took the witness stand in his own defense after the other defendants gave their testimony.

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 17.—(AP.)—William Feeney, district organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, today telegraphed to Gov. Pinchot in Washington complaints against the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Jones and Laughlin Company.

He charged the Pittsburgh company with dismissing several men for attending association meetings and said the latter firm used undue influence to prevent meetings of miners.

COX BREADLINE STILL LARGE

The general opinion prevailing that there is an upturn in business and re-employment has not been, as yet, reflected at Old St. Patrick's Church. The breadline which Father Cox is feeding every day is just as long as ever and appeals from families for food are just as many and just as urgent as they have been for several months past. On the other hand Father Cox finds that the response to his appeals is falling off. He needs money, food, clothing and furniture to take care of his army of destitute.

He will get another supply of food from the benefit show to be given by Manager W. D. Davis at the Triangle Theater, East Liberty, next Sunday, but this will only be a drop in the bucket in comparison with what he actually needs.

Father Cox is getting a check every Saturday from the Sun-Telegraph on account of his subscription drive. This helps to feed the breadline. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

Democrats to Honor Seven Legislators

By MARK SHIELDS

Allegheny County Democrats will hold a testimonial meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock in the Fort Pitt Hotel in recognition of the work of the seven members of the House from this county in the recent session of the Legislature.

Mr. Shields

It is an occasion upon which the Democrats might well drop any factional spirit and join in the tribute, as the members certainly earned applause by their attitude throughout the session. Much criticism is heard of the Legislature — and it is justified—but blanket indictments are not reasonable, and there should be always excepted in this criticism the work of the seven Allegheny County Democrats.

Parenthetically, there were some Democrats from other counties, as well as some Republicans, who strove their mightiest for satisfactory accomplishments, but the mechanics of legislation plus a preponderant opposition nullified much of their good intent.

Accomplishments of Democrats Cited

However, the Democrats have to their accomplishment one forward step, and that is the passage of a bill which prohibits party raiding in a primary. That is, a candidate must file as a Democrat or Republican and not in both primaries, the sole exception being the judiciary.

Furthermore, the Democrats prevented the plan to have beer licensing under the jurisdiction of the courts, which would have made the business a fine racket for some lawyers. It is true they wanted a bi-partisan commission to issue licenses, which was not so good—being a relict of that old curse of beggaring recognition. But eventually they stepped to the front for the present license system, which is one portion of the beer bill which is generally approved.

It will be noted that the Democrats are recognizing as worthy of merit "seven" of their party from this county. They are not considering as party members Representatives Jacob Shenkel and Joseph A. Rectenwald, both of whom usually voted with the Republican organization. Rectenwald finally losing his job with the County Commissioners for so doing.

Messrs. Shenkel and Rectenwald lost Republican nominations and won in the Democratic primary, a double-barreled approach which will be impossible under the party raiding law.

The seven to be honored are John Kane, John L. Powers, Clair E. McGinnis, John J. O'Keefe, George V. Beech, James L. Quinn and Charles Harmuth.

Labor Federation Head To Be Among Speakers

John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, which backed such legislation as old age pensions and minimum wages, supported by the bulk of the Democrats of the Legislature, and killed by the Republican bosses, will be one of the speakers. Democratic State Chairman Warren Van Dyke will be another, and a third will be Mrs. Carol Miller, Democratic national committee woman.

County Chairman David L. Lawrence probably will preside. Mr. Lawrence was constantly in Harrisburg during the session, and early learned the devious ways of veteran legislators. Indeed, it was Mr. Lawrence who held the Democratic group in cohesion when there was danger that it might shiver to pieces on the rock of factionalism.

It was no time before the Democrats lost confidence in their floor leader, Representative Wilson G. Sarig, of Berks, who had been backed by Mr. Lawrence and Joseph F. Guffey at the beginning of the session. Mr. Sarig, however, was a bitter foe of Gov. Pinchot, with whom the Democrats had a working agreement, and he did not furnish leadership. He voted for the much-discussed Turner bill, which became a test of strength between the organization Republicans on one hand, and the Democrats and Gov. Pinchot's Republican group on the other. Without the help of Mr. Sarig and a few others labeled Democrats the bill could not have passed.

Lawrence Leads His 'Army' As a Unit

The repudication of Mr. Sarig brought Mr. Lawrence into the picture.

Here in Allegheny county there have been sentiments, supported by perceptible facts, that there has been in the past a friendly association between Democratic leaders and some Republican organization bosses. But it must be stated in all frankness and fairness that there was no whit of evidence of such an association in the Legislature, and there were times when the Republicans would have given almost anything for such support.

Indeed, overtures are known to have been made to some of the seven from Allegheny County, but they were repulsed. There was solid support for every piece of social justice legislation, and a sturdy but vain effort to overturn the Republican organization.

Mr. Lawrence led his army as a unit having its own identity, with no hyphens, and is entitled to have that statement broadcast.

The Monday night meeting is something of a curtain raiser to the big Democratic dinner June 3, when National Chairman James A. Farley will be present.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes [illegible] is to be a speaker at that [illegible]. Mr. Ickes is a Progressive Republican of the Pinchot type who supported President Roosevelt openly last year, a sentiment about which the Governor was a bit coy.

Hiking Best Way To Keep Youth, Says Woman, 67

MRS. FRANCES REESE, 67

Far West Pilgrim Gets Many 'Lifts' In Wanderings

If you want to keep young, see your country, and see it on foot, advises Mrs. Frances Reese, 67-year-old widow, who hitch-hiked into Pittsburgh today.

Looking less than 50, and feeling "much younger," Mrs. Reese thinks there is "nothing like hiking 4,000 miles to give one a new outlook on life, sharpen the mind and restore health."

For years she had spent most of her time on railroads visiting her four brothers and sisters in the four corners of the United States and Canada, until last November, when she set out to hitch-hike from her home in Bellingham, Wash., "just to see if I couldn't throw off the chronic pneumonia I had suffered from so long."

There's no trouble at all getting "lifts" and everybody is "so nice," except in the South, where she says:

"The southern hospitality just isn't. You have to pay for everything you get there."

Mrs. Reese, refined, cultured and financially independent, "wouldn't have missed my hiking experience for all the world," she declares. On her way now to Toronto, Canada, she intends to return home by way of Chicago to visit the Century of Progress Exposition.

And with her will go her home-made pigskin traveling bag, "the only responsibility I have."

France and Reich In Necking Party But Not Petting

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

Looks like President Roosevelt's message is to the court of last appeal. Otherwise known as common sense.

The belligerent Europeans will try everything before they try that.

France and Germany are at each other's throats and neither one is a pearl necklace.

Mr. Roosevelt points out that war is expensive and victory is no balancing receipt.

But asking 54 nations to lay down their guns is too big an order for any one man's kitchenette.

The Spartan youth is going hitch-hiking again and will come home without his thumb.

Seems the European mother feels better when her boy is in a war. She knows he ain't hanging around billiard rooms and dance halls.

COUNTY PARKS BEER SALE UP IN AIR

Mansfield Opposition Leaves Question Undecided

Much of the attraction in the contract for county parks concessions was gone today after Commissioner W. D. Mansfield had made it plain that he would vote against authorizing the concessionnaires to sell beer, and that there would be no monopolies.

The question of beer sales was left undecided, while Park Director A. M. Marion was given the opportunity to interview several of the larger stores and bakeries to interest them in operating the park stands.

M'GOVERN REFUSES VOTE

Chairman C. C. McGovern, who had been appointed a committee of one to handle the park concession problem, did not vote when his colleagues laid down three rules to govern the concessionnaires, although the whole matwas supposed to have been in his hands. He contended he had no part in the unofficial handing over of three South Park stands to apparently favored operators.

Numerous concessionnaires who had been attempting to bid on the concession, however, said the affair had been handled by county authorities in a manner that indicated until yesterday that three favored persons were to get them.

PRIVILEGES SPLIT

Mansfield and Commissioner C. M. Barr voted to divide the concessions, rather than to award them to one individual or concern. They decided on a 30-day clause in the lease to terminate the contract of any concessionnaire not giving proper service.

It also was decided the South Park concessionnaire would have to pay 10 per cent of the gross receipts to the county as will the airport concessionnaire. The individual or firm in North Park will only pay 5 per cent of gross receipts, as the number of visitors is not so great as at South Park and the airport.

The contract of Joseph Slater, operator of a refreshment stand at the airport, was continued by the board.

M'MATH GIRL'S KIN GET MEDALS

PHILADELPHIA, May 17. — (INS.) — Francis McMath and his son, Robert McMath, of the University of Michigan, grandfather and uncle, respectively, of 10-year-old Peggy McMath, central figure in the recent Massachusetts kidnaping, today were awarded medals by the Franklin Institute here for scientific achievements.

McMath and his son and Judge Henry S. Hulbert, senior probate Judge of Wayne County, Mich., were awarded Wetherill medals for their work in celestial photography.

Evelyn Tells How Thaw Drew Gun When He Saw White at Hotel Dinner

SYNOPSIS

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has told in previous installments of her life story—which she hopes will be a lesson to all girls that "you can't break the rules and win"—of her love for Stanford White and of Harry Thaw's wild jealousy. Twice she visited Europe with Thaw. The first trip ended in a break after Thaw had forced Evelyn to confess her romance with White. There was a reconciliation, however, and today Evelyn describes the close of their second tour and their return to New York.

CHAPTER XII.

After the incident in Domremy, when Thaw left his sacrilegious autograph in the visitors' book at the shrine of Joan of Arc, I was only too glad to get away from France. We went to London, where I met Thaw's sister.

Since her unfortunate marriage to the Earl of Yarmouth, who had never made her happy, by the way, she had been living in London. Poor Alice!

Here again—dinners, theaters and suppers. I have to say this for Harry Thaw, he always kept things moving, day and night.

I had wanted to see many things in Paris—but I had been hard pressed to get Thaw to take me even to the Louvre. Napoleon's tomb or any of the other historic spots.

Jealousy Persists

He wouldn't let me go anywhere without him. He was this way in London, too. I wanted to see the Tower of London—and I couldn't because he wouldn't take me and was crazy with jealousy because I wanted to go there alone. I suppose he thought I would find Stanford White hiding in this Tower, too!

All Thaw would say was:

"No. I should think you would be ashamed to visit a tower!"

The sarcasm, of course, had to do with the old Madison Square Garden tower, where he knew I kept many of my trysts with Stanford, the echoes of which were destined to reverberate around the world.

Inadvertently, you see, I had started him off on his favorite outlet for venom and hatred. Could I have foreseen that? Honestly, I was always afraid to say anything for fear I would say something which would remind him of Stanford White and throw him into a frenzy.

My meeting with Alice Thaw came several days after we had reached London. One day Thaw came to the hotel where I was living and said he had told his sister all about me, and that she was eager to meet me. At first I was only mildly interested.

"Well, when is it going to happen?" I asked.

"Tomorrow," he said. "Tomorrow afternoon you will go and have tea with Her Grace."

"Aren't you taking me?" I asked.

"No."

"Well," I protested, "I don't care to go alone. Why can't you take me there?"

"No," he answered, "it is all arranged."

Next day he changed his mind a bit. He agreed that if I went alone for tea (of course I was to be watched all the way from the hotel to Alice's home), he would join us later and drive me back to the hotel.

His sister had taken a small house, one of those charming London residences in a quiet square—I forget the exact address. I rang a bell and a footman in livery appeared and ushered me up a wide flight of polished stairs. Then, begging my pardon, he stepped before me to the entrance of a charming chintz-curtained sitting room and announced:

"Miss Eva-lyn Nesbit."

Thaw's Sister

Alice bore a striking resemblance to Harry. She was quite charming and gracious. We had tea and talked commonplaces until Harry came to take me away. But I noticed there was something sad about her. There was an unhappy expression on her face. She seemed to smile with difficulty, although she did her utmost to be nice to me.

I knew nothing about her married life, of course, but I had heard a good deal of unpleasant comment from Harry regarding the Earl of Yarmouth.

The Earl had made a lot of trouble and quite a scene at the marriage preliminaries. He had his eye on something more material than Alice's charms.

It was hardly a secret that Alice had "waited at the church" for hours while Yarmouth and his lawyers argued with representatives of the Thaw family

'HEALER' RULED U. S. JUDGE

WASHINGTON, May 17. — (INS.) — Federal Judge Harold Louderback, of the Northern California District, named H. B. Hunter receiver for the Russell Colvin Company, on the recommendation of a "metaphysical healer," the Senate was informed today at the jurist's impeachment trial.

This development came from the testimony given by W. S. Leake, absent "key witness," at a House inquiry in San Francisco. Leake was the "healer" and told how he first called the Judge's attention to Hunter.

Louderback then named Hunter receiver after dismissing Addison G. Strong, another San Franciscan, because the latter insisted upon naming his own receiver's attorney.

JURY INFORMED OF KIDNAP DEN

BARNSTABLE, Mass., May 17. —(AP.)—Chief of Police Emulous E. Hall, of Harwich, whose hunch led to the discovery of the place where Margaret (Peggy) McMath was concealed after she was kidnaped May 2, told a grand jury about the case today.

Chief Hall suspected that Kenneth Buck, arrested as the girl's kidnaper, had not told the whole truth in his alleged confession after the return of the little girl and his suspicions led to the discovery of the true hiding place.

VOTE VIOLATORS PARDON FOUGHT

HARRISBURG, May 17.—Opposition to the pardoning of George Baguet, Peter Cappola and Julius Bonetti, three former Pittsburgh policemen, was made today to the Pardon Board by Edward C. Boyle, attorney for the Pittsburgh Registration Commission.

The three policemen were found guilty of violating the registration laws in the first district of the Thirty-first Ward in the spring primary of last year.

The three are now out on parole and have lost their positions on the police force.

Letters were read by the board from the District Attorney and the trial judge saying they were not opposed to the granting of a pardon.

No attorney appeared before the board to argue the case of the three policemen.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 17.

Well, lots of war news in the papers. I knew it was coming when I saw that we had cut down on our Army and Navy. If you want to know when a war is coming, just watch the U. S. and see when they start cutting down on their defense. It's the surest barometer in the world.

Will Rogers

The Democrats have one great failing, (that I was in hopes they had lived down) and that is they just want to fix the affairs of the world. Now it's big-hearted, and it's mighty generous, but it's just not possible for me (three thousand miles away), to tell you what caliber gun to have in your house. You know your neighbors better than I do.

Yours, WILL.

STATE LEAGUE BACKS FIGHT ON 'PEONAGE'

Musmanno Urges All Civic Bodies to Join Crusade

Sweatshops in Pennsylvania encountered opposition on two fronts in Pittsburgh today. Almost simultaneous with Judge M. A. Musmanno's call for civic bodies and business organizations to unite in a crusade to drive child peonage out of the state, a resolution was unanimously adopted by the state board of directors of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, protesting the sweatshop practices.

The resolution, presented by Miss Gertrude Ely, state president, at the directors' opening session at Hotel Schenley, supports the State Department of Labor and Industry in its efforts to protect the public against the sweatshop. The action followed a scathing denunciation of the practices by Prof. Ralph Turner, of the University of Pittsburgh.

DEFENDS MAIDS

In his attack on the sweatshop, Turner went beyond the confines of factories and declared:

"The sweatshop problem is not confined to the shirt factories. There are homes in Squirrel Hill where maids are employed at $3 a week. A social service board in Pittsburgh recently was hiring a secretary, with a suggested salary of $15 a week."

Describing sweatshop conditions as "atrocities," Judge Musmanno last night called for action in an address before the Independent Voters' League in Clairton High School auditorium.

Concerning present conditions, he said:

"We are apparently going back to those infamous days which permitted the apprenticeship of children of tender years. We seem to be drifting back to the days of Oliver Twist."

200,000 EMPLOYED

Inquiries by the Bureau of Industrial Investigation have revealed that sweatshops in this state now employ more than 200,000 men, women and children, he declared.

Hours of work range from 50 to 90 hours a week in those instances, he declared.

Regarding child labor, he declared:

"Children have been forced to work for as little as 5 cents a day. Boys and girls, 10 and 12 years of age, have been taken from school and forced to labor 10 to 18 hours a day."

CHARGES SLAVERY

He described in detail low rates of wages in certain clothing factories. Then he said:

"It is utterly appalling that in these days of so-called enlightenment, Pennsylvania should permit child peonage of this sort. Businessmen who cannot make business prosper without drawing the profit from the blood of the child workers do not deserve to be in business."

In closing his address, Judge Musmanno read a poem, a parody on the English poet, Thomas Hood's, "Song of a Shirt," suggesting that Pennsylvania citizens strangle the sweatshop racket.

Pinchot, Martin Tilt On Sweatshop Stand

HARRISBURG, May 17.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot says Gen. Edward Martin is "the sole defender of the sweatshop operators," and the Republican state chairman replies that "if the Governor were fair" he would note that Martin has denounced such "migratory manufacturers."

Martin last week characterized as rasketeers those persons who seek to array class against class, and ina statement assailed "a prominent Pennsylvania woman," generally recognized to be Mrs. Pinchot, for parading with young textile strikers.

Answering this statement, Pinchot last night said "that attack was the voice of concentrated wealth sreaming in behalf of the few people who own most of the money in the United States," and asserted Mrs. Pinchot's activities in behalf of the children strikers in Allentown need no explanation.

Countering with another statement, Martin declared that it "is a mystery to me" how sweatshops "have grown up in the last two years during which he (Pinchot) has been Governor and has had a well-manned and well-financed Department of Labor and Industry."

Pinchot declared that the Republican organization should repudiate Martin if his attack on "those who went to the aid of the sweatshop victims" does not represent the organization's attitude.

'LOST' RUSSIAN'S PAINTING HERE

Institute Seeks Artist Not Heard of Since Before War

Some day Nicholas Chimona, famous Russian painter, may emerge from the shadows of 20 years.

And if he does, he can come to Carnegie Institute and claim again his picture "Hellas." Since 1914, it had reposed in the cellar repository of the institute. Last week, it was brought to light and hung in an outer office of Samuel Harden Church, president of the institute.

Chimona has not been heard from since 1914. He submitted his pictures to the international show here in that year.

Then the war came on and return of Chimona's picture became impossible. Officials of the institute's show, anxious to have all pictures returned to their owners, tried to locate Chimona in 1918. But whether the painter had dropped at the front, had been exiled by the revolution, had been shot by the newly ascending Communists, or had starved by the roadside as had Russian millions these they could only conjecture.

The picture, fairly valuable, has as its subject a group of the islands of Greece.

No Liquor as Beverage, Doctors Resolve

The stand to be taken by members of the Allegheny County Medical Society on the new regulations covering use of medicinal liquor was shown in a resolution passed at a meeting of the board of directors in the Hotel Schenley last night. The resolution was a result, it was said, of embarrassment caused members by recent articles in newspapers. It read as follows:

"Be it resolved the following statement be issued to the public:

"These regulations do not restrict the quantities of medicinal liquor actually required in the legitimate practice of medicine.

"The Allegheny County Medical Society knows that the physicians of this community will adhere strictly to the purpose and letter of the law, and it also knows that medicinal liquor should not be diverted to beverage purposes or that any impression that such be the case be created in the minds of the public.

"The ethics of the medical profession in any interpretation do not condone the misuse of a physician's prerogative under any circumstance."

Wilson's Doctor During War Dies

PHILADELPHIA, May 17. — (AP.) — Dr. John Chalmers Da Costa, internationally-known surgeon and teacher, died yesterday. He was 70. During the World War he served as physician to President Wilson and accompanied him to the peace conference in France.

MORE JUVENILE COURT AGENTS HELD NEED

The system of foster homes for Juvenile Court wards in Allegheny County would be satisfactory if more investigators and supervisors were employed, Miss Mary S. Labaree, director of the Children's Bureau, State Department of Welfare, declared today.

Miss Labaree addressed a group of women attending the convention of the state board of directors, League of Women Voters, prior to formal opening of the convention. She urged county planning in children's work.

MORE WORKERS URGED

In a statement Miss Labaree said:

"If Allegheny County would spend more money in providing an adequate staff of investigators and supervisors in the home finding department, adequate medical care and transportation, the taxpayers would get a better return on their money than through the institutional system. The trouble with the Juvenile Court is that it has had an inadequate staff both in number and in training."

Marcus Aaron, president of the Board of Public Education, addressing the convention, said school boards were sensible to need of reducing taxes, but could not "be expected to care for a 100 per cent increase in enrollment at the same cost as teaching a less number of children."

Aaron suggested reform in taxation to relieve the burden on real estate.

Commissioners Decree Open Ward Hearings

Any conference between the County Commissioners and County Court Judges regarding investigators' charges of ill treatment of Juvenile Court wards will be open, the Commissioners decided yesterday.

Judge Richard A. Kennedy, of County Court, had requested a private conference, holding work of Juvenile Court was being harmed by publicity given the investigators' reports. He asked for facts on which the investigators' conclusions were based.

Five city detectives today sped to Wellsburg, W. Va., for Edward Turpack, escaped lifer from the Western Penitentiary and came back without him.

Aman thought to be Turpack, taken from a Panhandle railroad train there, proved to be a taxi driver of Indianapolis, en route to his home in Sistersville, W. Va. There was no charge against him and he was released.

L. E. Cornell, agent at Fourth avenue station, saw the man whom he believed to be Turpack board the train and notified Wellsburg authorities and city detectives. On Cornell's top the man was taken from the train at Wellsburg. After detectives questioned him he was permitted to resume his journey.

Heron has promised to co-operate with a committee of business leaders and city officials which will be named Thursday, Crandall announced. All business firms are invited to register for participation, Crandall said, with no charge being made.

A festival program will fill the evening. Preliminary plans call for 20 bands and many floats. Smiles will be dollars, a cash award of $20 each being offered to the broadest feminine and masculine smile. The funniest and the fanaciest costumes will share in prizes. Silver trophies will be offered to the best appearing fraternal drill team, the best musical organization and the civic organization with the largest number of members in line of march.

Guy Pertinaci has filed suit against the School District of Turtle Creek, demanding $10,000 for the death of his son, Quinto Pertinaci, 15, as a result of an accident on the school playground.

Pertinaci complains that while his son was chinning himself on crossbars, he fell, broke his arm. Lockjaw developed, because of the accident, which he claims was due to the absence of a sand box under the crossbar.

Advertising Specimens From Abroad Displayed

American Designers Hold Supremacy, Exhibit Shows

By PENELOPE REDD

The annual exhibition sponsored by the Pittsburgh Advertising Club, now on view at the Hotel William Penn through Friday, May 19, attempts a change of form from the thousand and one screens displaying printed matter in previous years.

Miss Redd

Even in so lean a year, the current experiment indicates that in a good season with abundant examples of typography and well planned exhibits of the products advertised, the show could be made highly diverting.

Two exhibits of a special character serve to exemplify the range. One is an international exhibit of advertising examples from almost all nations in the world. None of the designers from the countries contributing has been inspired by the purposive ambition of the American typographic designer. Not even the German and French examples have the style which we have come to expect in American advertising art. The exhibits from Russia, with their ferocious propaganda of destruction, shock the eye accustomed to our method of using advertising persuasively.

A small but significant unit at the Advertising Club's exhibition is the group of containers awarded honors at the second annual national competition sponsored by the National Alliance of Art and Industry. The Wolf Award, for which these containers competed, is contributed by Irwin D. Wolf, of Pittsburgh to stimulate designers to improve containers in common use throughout the nation's households. Simon de Valuchier's glass container for floor wax received the Wolf Award. Some 300 tin and glass containers, folding boxes and packages displaying merchandising ingenuity designed during 1932, were submitted.

Richard Bach of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, a pioneer in the endeavor to apply the principles of fine design to objects in common use, who was a judge, said:

"Good design has nothing to do with precious materials or with high prices and does not thrive on them."

GOLFERS PICKET IN FEE FIGHT

County park golf patrons opposed to the $20 permit fee are picketing the county office building, attempting to change the minds of golfers bound to get annual permits, Park Director A. M. Marion has informed the Commissioners. Marion said:

"Someone has been picketing the office building to head off persons who are coming to the park office for permits. I have not seen these pickets myself, but have been told of them."

Commissioner C. C. McGovern voiced the belief that advocates of a lower rate are going a bit too far if they are picketing.

The Commissioners made one concession to the users of the park links when they announced that annual permits could be obtained on the installment plan.

Chicago Teachers' Pay Checks in Mail

CHICAGO, May 17.—(INS.)—With record speed today, the Board of Education authorized the payment of $12,438,433 to Chicago teachers and civil service employes.

Torrence, 55, character actor known to millions of theatergoers, died early Monday morning after an operation. After cremation here his ashes were to be sent to California.

DOCTOR

It is not often that you need a doctor. From month to month life runs smoothly. The telephone you may give little thought to quietly brings its news and runs its daily errands. • Suddenly—sickness—perhaps at night! A feverish child—a fall—gripping pain! Only speed and a doctor's skill may then avert tragedy. Then, if never before, you NEED a telephone in your home!

You can have a telephone in your home for less than 10 cents a day. It is far better to have one and "not need it" than to need a telephone in an emergency and not have it!

CHEVROLET "20 miles to the gallon!" "22!" "24!" "Sometimes as high as 25 or 26." Those are Chevrolet owners speaking. And they're indulging in some good old-fashioned boasting over the gasoline habits of their new Chevrolets. Yes—gallons certainly do s-t-r-e-t-c-h a long way in a Chevrolet Six—farther, in fact, than in the tank of any other full-size car. And the same thing holds true of oil. Put five quarts in the Chevrolet crankcase and the chances are those same five quarts will still be there when you change your oil again. For, as millions of miles have proved, the new Chevrolet Six certainly is a world-beater for economy. You'll save on fuel—and on upkeep, too. And on repairs. And on depreciation. And the price you'll pay for the Chevrolet Standard Six Coach is lower than the price of any other 5-passenger 6-cylinder closed car you can buy. $455! What a price—What a car!

THOMAS LAUDS PRESIDENT'S PEACE STEP

Praise for President Roosevelt's world peace pronouncement came from Norman Thomas, his Socialist opponent at the polls, last night, coupled with a declaration that the United States is entering an era of "state capitalism."

The Socialist standard bearer asserted mankind is at a crossroads, but that not one road leads back to the old capitalistic system.

He said "state capitalism" faces the danger or drifting to dictatorship, but the dictator would not be President Roosevelt.

Of the "new deal" Thomas said he doubted even if the "new dealers" know what is happening, but qualified his statement by adding that perhaps the "brain trust" knows.

The Socialist leader addressed several hundred persons in Carnegie Music Hall. His speech wound up a speaking tour of Western Pennsylvania.

NOT SOCIALISM

Discussing domestic problems, Thomas paid tribute to President Roosevelt's vigorous action, but said the power of government is being used to maintain capitalism, and that the "new deal" is in no sense Socialism.

He said the present system was begun by President Hoover when he formed the farm relief board. He said there was "no rugged individualism" in it or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and continued:

"It is the death of the old type of capitalism, and when you add to that that Mr. Mellon's and even Mr. Morgan's affairs are being looked into—well, one would have thought four years ago that Pittsburgh's foundations would have been shaken.

"I am not prophesying—state capitalism may prolong capitalism, but at any rate, the old order is dead."

Thomas hit with caustic criticism relief work being carried on.

He suggested a six-months subsidy of the consumers, which, he said, should have been the first act toward recovery, and asserted the first need was a drastic increase in spending power.

GIRL, YOUTH DIE IN LOVE PACT

NEWBURG, Mo., May 17.—(AP.)—The bodies of Chester Ormsby, 17, who was to have been graduated from the Newburg High School tomorrow, and Lois Johnson, 18, to whom he had been attentive, were found late yesterday near their automobile parked on a lonely country road.

W. E. Licklider, Coroner of Phelps County, after an inquest, said the youth apparently had shot and killed the girl and then taken his own life. A note found in the car read, "Please forgive us." Ormsby held a revolver in his hand. His body was lying across that of the girl near the center of the road.

The Coroner said he would return a verdict of 'murder and suicide." He also expressed belief the deaths resulted from a "love affair."

Miss Johnson, a pretty blonde, was graduated from the school last year.

FISHER HEADS COMMERCE MEN

Former Gov. John S. Fisher was named president of the Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting of the board of directors yesterday. He succeeds Thomas A. Dunn. Other officers were reelected. They are:

Vice presidents, Charles K. Robinson, William P. Witherow, and Dr. Edward R. Weidlein, and general manager and secretary-treasurer, Frank C. Harper.

Hold Three Accused Of Receiving Loot

Accused of receiving stolen goods, Louis Essner and Harry Soffer, of Duquesne, and Henry Famovitz, of Braddock, were held for court by Justice of the Peace Bernard Volk, of Versailles Township.

Arrested by state police, they were accused of receiving electric refrigerators and washing machines from two trucks held up last month.

Empty Your Gall Bladder

And You'll Feel Like a Billion Dollars!

Sleepless nights, dog-tired days, headaches; pains in all parts of the body—indigestion—gas. Do you suffer from one or all?

And have you tried every medicine under the sun, only to find yourself back where you started?

No wonder, for you, like thousands of others have probably been treating yourself for everything but the right thing. Get at the unsuspected cause—your gall bladder. If sluggish, it won't pour into your small intestines the most important digestive juice necessary for neutralizing gastric acid, quickening digestion and disinfecting the intestinal tract. If this juice doesn't flow freely, then your food sours, putrifies, stomach becomes filled with gas and acidity.

From Germany's greatest chemists comes a simple, pleasant means to make this digestive juice flow freely, and put you on the sunny side of life. Magnesia Oxoids, little white tablets that release pure oxygen. This amazing oxygen—purer than the air you breathe—plus magnesia, gently stimulates the gall bladder, neutralizes burning acidity and sweeps that poison-packed bowel clean.

Take two Oxoids after each meal—and before retiring—drink plenty of water—put your gall bladder to work—and you'll jump out of your skin for joy. Such new health! Such robust vigor! Get Magnesia Oxoids today from your druggist.

Hoffman Plays March at Wedding

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—(AP.)—Josef Hoffman, noted pianist, yesterday played the wedding march from Lohrengrin for the first time—at a wedding.

The ceremony united in marriage 16-year-old Irene Goldowsky, daughter of Mme. Lea Luboschultz, internationally known violinist, and Walter L. Wolf, Philadelphia attorney.

Order Von Stroheim To Pay Son's Keep

LOS ANGELES, May 17.—(Universal)—Despite the plea of Erich von Stoheim, once famous film actor and director, that he is now without funds or employment, the court order compelling him to pay $75 a week for the care of his 17-year-old son, Erich, Jr., will stand, it was ruled in Superior Court yesterday.

Adam Urban, 55, and his son, Carl, 20, both of 900 Beaver road, Ambridge, were held under $2,000 bail each, together with George Puskarick, 43, of New Sheffield, at a hearing last night, after officers testified finding moonshine whisky in both the Urban and Puskarick machines.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Frederick Mortimer Clapp, director of the department of fine arts, University of Pittsburgh, has been designated by Secretary of State Hull one of six delegates to represent this country at the thirteenth international congress on the history of art to be held September 4 to 7 at Stockholm, Sweden.

Stepfather Shot, Girl Sentenced

Olive oil

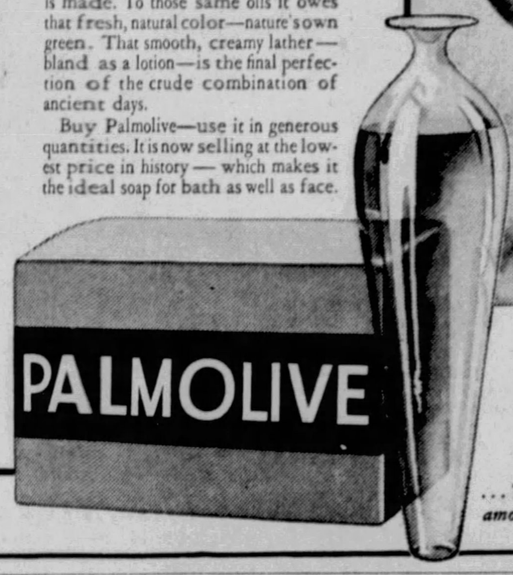
is nature's oldest beauty secret

—and it's olive oil that makes Palmolive green

OUT of the wealth of Nature, science singles out certain beauty aids that have stood the test of time—soothing, protective olive and palm oils.

Palmolive owes its soothing, gentle quality to these fine oils of which it is made. To those same oils it owes that fresh, natural color—nature's own green. That smooth, creamy lather—bland as a lotion—is the final perfection of the crude combination of ancient days.

Buy Palmolive—use it in generous quantities. It is now selling at the lowest price in history — which makes it the ideal soap for bath as well as face.

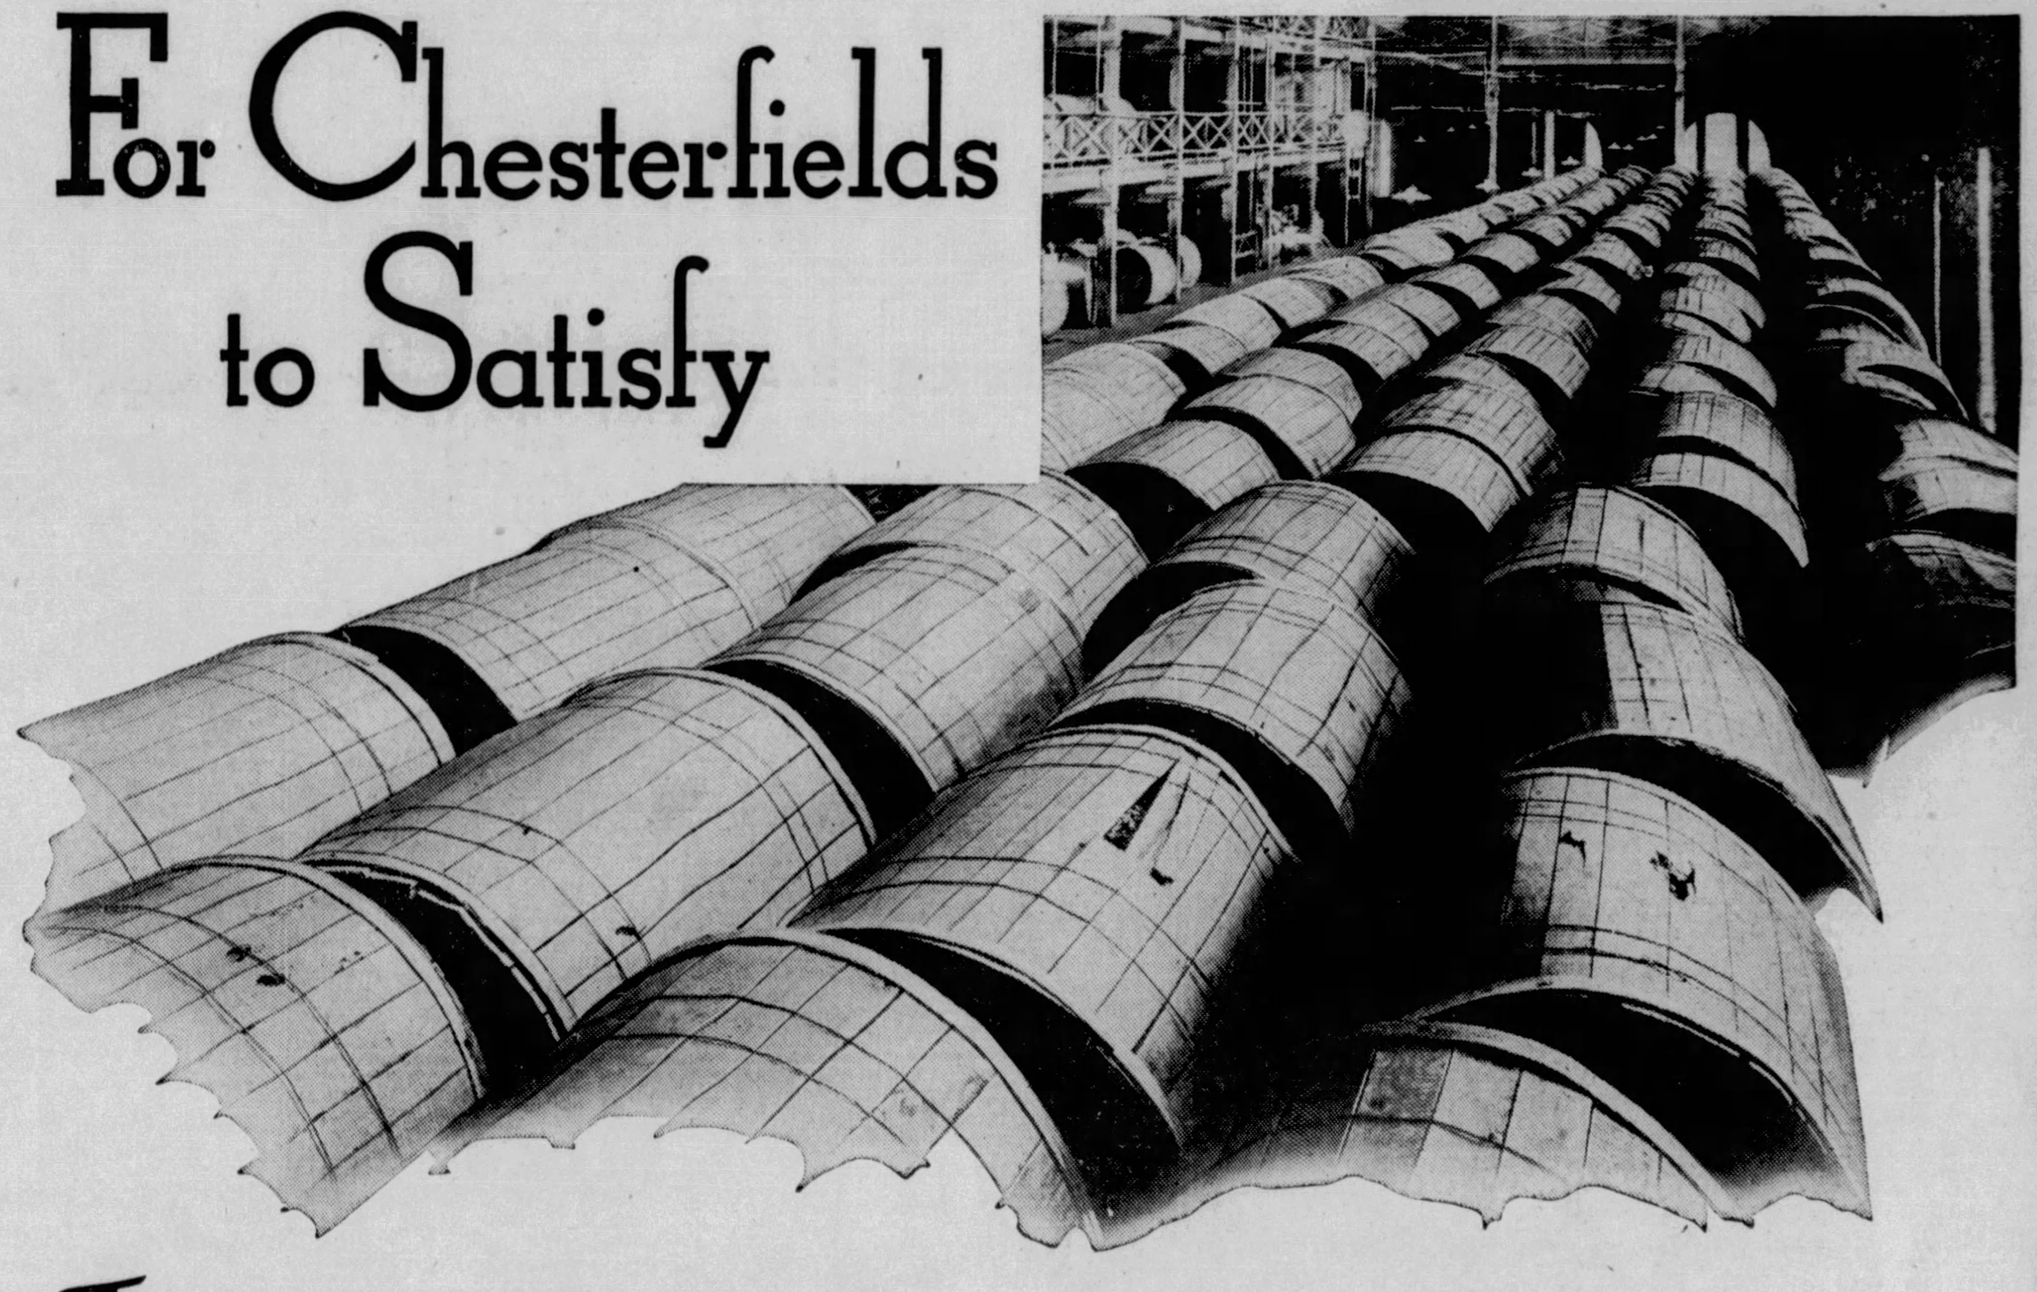


This is the treatment

Massage a thick, rich lather of Palmolive Soap and luke warm water into the skin of face, neck, and throat. Rinse thoroughly with warm water, followed by cold. Follow that treatment twice a day to retain natural loveliness—to keep the skin of youth.

... The vial at the left shows the exact amount of olive oil we put into each cake

For Chesterfields to Satisfy



It takes barrels of money —

THEY ARE MILD and yet they Satisfy

— put away for 30 months

Four miles of warehouses are used to store our tobaccos. The crops now in storage are worth about $70,000,000... most of it for Chesterfield Cigarettes.

The Domestic kinds are packed away in wooden hogsheads that weigh 1,000 pounds and stand as high as a man's head.

Like fine wine, tobacco improves with age. So after our buyers select, from the various markets, the right kind of tobacco for Chesterfield, we put it away for 30 months or more to become mellow and sweet.

This ageing process is expensive, but there is no short-cut to make tobaccos milder—to make them taste better. It just takes money and time to make Chesterfields.

Extra Gets $5 More For Just Sitting

An extra girl left the Fox Films studio with an extra $5 as compensation. She had sat all day on the box seat of an eighteenth century coach which bounced and rocked perilously for scenes of "Berkeley Square."

"Give her $5 extra," said Frank Lloyd, the director. "She earned it, the poor kid."

Several Companies Making Plans for Films With Fair as Background

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, May 17.—In spite of the usual attempts to camouflage, it's an open secret that several companies are planning to send troupes to Chicago to film pictures based on the World's Fair.

Universal now admits that they'll center a Sazu Pitts-Slim Summerville comedy around the visit of a small-town couple to the great exhibit. Their story will be called "At the Fair," and it probably will be made in June.

Zasu Pitts

Paramount is in the negotiating stage for a picture to be taken on the fair grounds. Mel Brown will direct, and the film is variously referred to as an educational two-reeler and as a feature production.

Another possible entry is Columbia. For the past year, it has owned a story called "World's Fair." Walter Wanger and Fulton Oursler authored it before they left this studio. Within the last few months several other companies have been angling to buy Columbia's rights. Final decision of the picture probably will be made by Harry Cohn in New York. The head of Columbia is due there now, along with Lawrence Stallings, who will accompany him to Europe.

Al Jolson and Universal have been talking business. It's about a minstrel story called "Honey Man." Regardless of possible film plans, Al and Ruby Keeler leave here this week to attend the Schmeling-Baer fight in New York. They'll return to Hollywood.

Ruby Keeler

Says Al:

"If I go into a show, I have to stay away from Ruby. I don't like that kind of a Hollywood marriage. We'll stick together."

Great excitement on the Paramount lot when someone recognized a woman visitor as Greta Garbo. The shy Swede came over with Mrs. Berthold Viertel to look at Marlene Dietrich's latest picture, "The Song of Songs." Director Rouben Mamoulian ran the picture off for them, which would seem to give point to the report that he will direct Greta in "Queen Christina."

Those divorce court stories, which would have her 27 years old, are all wrong, says Joan Crawford. She insists it's only 25 . . . Joan's brother Hal Le Sueur, is now in the stock company at G-G-M. He's playing a bit in "Night Flight" . . . That long-awaited story by Charles Chaplin will begin in the September issue of a national magazine. Charlie still says he will have a picture finished by 1934, but it looks doubtful.

Morris Gest, New York producer whose name has been associated with many distinguished artistic achievements of the theater, in a letter to Maurice Schwartz, stated that the latter's production of "Yoshe Kalb" was the most profound and colorful production in any language seen in New York for years. He ranked it in a class with productions of Max Reinhardt and David Belasco. "Yoshe Kalb" will be acted by Mr. Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company in Syria Mosque tomorrow night.

The "flash-back," a technical expedient much in use in the silent movies a few years ago, is employed in "Caponsacchi," which will be given by Walter Hampden in the Nixon next Wednesday and Thursday, May 24 and 25. By means of this device there was shown on the screen a visualization of something being related in the main action of the story. And so it is in "Capponsacchi," which opens as a papal court in the Vatican, with the Pope as judge at the trial of a man for the murder of his wife. He accuses Capponsacchi, from which point until near the close, the action is in flash-back showing what really had occured, visualizing the testimony given at the trial. At its close comes the court scene again, the accused being found guilty and Capponsacchi exonerated. It is a dramatization of Robert Browning's poem, "The Ring and the Book," in which Mr. Hampden plays a heroic part, that of a warrior-priest. In addition to evening performances of "Capponsachhi" the company will be seen in "Hamlet" at a Thursday matinee.

(The thoughts of a man with insomnia)

MAYBE I SHOULD have opened the window a little more. That's what probably gives me those headaches in the morning. On the other hand, if I open it any more, the rain will come in. Confound the rain. It's so—so depressing. Makes me feel chilly to watch the drops stagger down the pane.

Still it's nice to be in bed when it rains. Makes you feel sort of secure and warmish. Rain, rain, go away; come again some other day. Gee, it's been years since I've said that. Years and years and years.

I was a kid, then. I remember that Mom told me if I said it enough times, the rain would stop. But it never did. It kept beating down in steady streams, and I couldn't go out to play. It used to be torture to look out the back window and see the yard full of little muddy rivers and lakes.

And then, when the sun came out hot and clear, the kids would all beg their mothers to be allowed out again. What was that big kid's name? Something like Buster, I think. He used to take me down to the railroad and build a fire. I used to love fires. I still do.

But coming home was terrible. I knew that Dad and Mom would ask me where I'd been.

Dad would sit reading the paper, and coughing slightly as he turned the pages, and all of a sudden he'd say: "Well, son, where were you this afternoon?" I knew it was coming then, and I'd try to appear careless and say: "Oh, the kids and me was playin' Red Rover." And Dad would look up from his paper and say: "You weren't playing around a bonfire, were you, son?" And I'd say: "No, Dad, why?"

And I knew that he could smell the smoke on my clothes, and I'd try to brave it out, but it never worked. He used to get mad because I lied, and once I remember he whacked me on the legs with his razor strop and Mom came flying out of the kitchen and hollered at him and they had an awful fight.

Dad went out without saying a word, and Mom sat at the supper table and cried while she was eating. Late that night Dad came home smelling like a saloon and laughed and tried to kid Mom out of it, but she was sore because he walked out.

Maybe if I punch a hole in this pillow, I'll be able to sleep better. Why can't I sleep like other people? I feel tired enough. But I can't. I just lie here and twist and turn, and pull my feet up and straighten them out again, and put my hands under my head and look out the window.

The doctor said it was nerves. Nerves, my eye. He's crazy, just like the rest of them. They're all loose. If they're so good at curing ills, why is it that they die? Now isn't that silly! "Why do they die?" I might just as well ask why anyone dies.

Wonder what I'll die of? Insomnia, probably. Do people die of insomnia? Sure people die of insomnia. Of course, they do. Indirectly, I suppose. But they die of insomnia just the same. It weakens them until they either go crazy or into a decline. And finally the doctor comes with those cute little oxygen tanks, and you start trying to remember those prayers you used to say when you were a kid.

Death is such a scary thing. It makes me frightened to think of it. Why must we think about it at all? Why can't it just sneak up on us without any warning and happen? Then it wouldn't be so bad. I remember once when Dad was in a good mood, he laughed and said that death was the one thing he was going to reserve until the last.

The doc said insomnia is brought on by bad nerves. And what, I asked him, brought on my bad nerves? And he smiled diplomatically and said maybe Esther had something to do with it. Esther. That's a scream. I should have bad nerves because she left me for a hair brush salesman. That's a riot, that is. That's a scream.

I should worry about her. What did she ever do for me? Take my money? That's about all.

Five years is a long time. But I can still see her, plain as day. "Dear," she'd say, "you look so tired. Let me take your shoes off. That's a good boy. I'm making supper for you now. I've got frankfurters and sauerkraut. You like frankfurters and sauerkraut, don't you dear?"

And then, when I got myself into debt for 2,000 bones, she walked out with the salesman. It must have been him who thought up the idea of leaving the new hairbrush on top of the farewell note. She'd never have had brains to think that one up.

Five years. I wonder where she is now? Probably in the gutter—I hope. There's one thing sweeter than sleep. That would be to have her crawl back to me, right up to the front door. And sweeter than that would be slamming the front door on her, and maybe catching her nose in the jamb. That would be swell. Swell, indeed.

Now I don't even feel tired. You'd think that thoughts of Esther would make me more tired, but they don't. I think I'm a liar at heart. I must be. Else why would I say that I'd slam the door on Esther's face and catch her nose in it? You're a simp. You'd take her back in in a minute.

You'd open the door and you'd stand looking at her, and then maybe you'd cry. No, there's no maybe about it. You'd cry like a baby. Yes, you're as dumb as all that. Dumber. You'd probably apologize to her. You'd get down on your knees. You'd grovel.

Sure you would . . . 'Course you would . . . You can't sleep . . . Five years . . . You'd cry for joy . . . Sure you would . . . You're the type . . . Can't go sleep . . . Go goofy . . . Esther . . . Can't sleep . . . Can't . . . Can't . . . Can't....

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Value of Spinal Punctures in Recognizing Diseases

Many persons misunderstand what is meant by "spinal puncture" and are alarmed if it is suggested. There is a popular idea that it is dangerous to have a spinal puncture. But when this procedure and its purpose are explained, they forget their fears.

Dr. Copeland

Spinal puncture is used to aid in the recognition of certain diseases. In some instances it is curative, bringing relief from pain and suffering.

Running through the inside of the spinal column, the backbone, is a space called the spinal canal. This carries the great nerve, the spinal cord, which is surrounded by more or less fluid.

Spinal puncture is the tapping of the spinal membranes for the purpose of obtaining some of the fluid. A small amount is withdrawn, examined under a microscope and subjected to various tests.

Examination of the spinal fluid is of great value in diagnosing certain disorders. In doubtful cases it may be the only means of actually determining whether or not a patient is suffering from tumor of the brain, tuberculosis of the brain, various forms of spinal meningitis, fractured skull and other disorders.

Fortunately, it is now possible to perform a spinal puncture without pain and discomfort to the patient. I can recall the days when spinal puncture was an uncomfortable procedure. Today, by the aid of local anesthesia, little, if any, discomfort is experienced. The patient may feel the slight pinprick of the hypodermic needle and perhaps a mild feeling of jar.

Spinal puncture may be performed in the home or at the hospital. It is preferably done at the hospital where all the facilities for the various tests are available.

You will recall that during the recent infantile paralysis epidemic it was advised that all suspected cases of paralysis be submitted to the spinal puncture. It was the only sure means of recognizing the disease in its early stages. The number of children who were subjected to this procedure was great. There were no mishaps or bad effects.

It is the universal testimony of friends of mine in the profession, men who have made hundreds of these punctures, that no harm results. One famous doctor wrote me as follows: "We have never had any bad results from our spinal punctures and are anxious to extend the benefits of this diagnostic procedure to all in whom it is plainly indicated."

No one will deny that the success of modern medicine is due to the increasing and accurate knowledge of the cause of disease. It is when the cause is not known that the outlook is unfavorable. The use of the laboratory tests, such as the blood count, the Wasserman test, spinal puncture and the X-ray examination, enables the modern physician to detect and prevent diseases that would prove fatal if unrecognized.

If your physician advises a spinal puncture do not hesitate to take advantage of this modern method of diagnosis. Do not fear the test and above all else, forget the false stories that have been circulated about it. It isn't as disagreeable as having a tooth extracted and certainly is no more dangerous.

REDUCE NOW WITHOUT THYROID WITHOUT SALTS WITHOUT DIET

Science finds absolutely safe way to lose ugly fat.

Here's wonderful news for women who want to make their figures slim and lovely. A great physician, who has specialized in research with the Pasteur Institute of Paris and famous clinics of America, has discovered an absolutely harmless tablet that will take off 8 or 10 pounds a month.

Now it is absurd for anyone to take dangerous drugs, or a daily dose of laxative salts that rushes food through the system half digested, and leads to chronic constipation. The new treatment contains no Thyroid Extract, no laxative drugs at all. It is a safe, natural regulator of the digestive ferments (Lipases) which control the production of fat in all human bodies.

You don't have to starve yourself or go through painful exercises. You simply take the tablets each day and continue to eat three ample meals. The fat disappears at just the places where you want to lose it. We will donate $500 to charity if anyone can prove that Vannay contains Thyroid, Iodine or any harmful drugs.

Start the treatment at once and all your fondest dreams of health and slim loveliness should come true. Ask your druggist for Vannay and be sure to see that name on the package. If he doesn't have Vannay, insist that he orders it for you.

MY OWN LIFE STORY :: By EVELYN NESBIT THAW

over the dowry—Pittsburgh dollars, then an international byword. He actually refused to go through with the ceremony until he got what he demanded for his precious title.

Alice will appear in a more important role later in this story. For now, however, London passes out of the picture and we return to New York.

On the homeward trip to New York, we had a surprise on shipboard. Edna Goodrich and her mother were fellow-passengers. As usual, Edna and her mother were traveling as sisters.

Now Edna and her mother had stopped speaking to me during the Florodora days—only two years before, but almost a generation of experiences had passed for me—and had not spoken since. Edna was jealous—so was her mother—because of my friendship with Stanford White, whom Edna had sued for breach of promise of marriage.

Marriage Rumors

Since neither Edna nor her mother had any use now for Stanford White, they were sympathetic and congenial companions for Harry Thaw. As a result Edna started speaking to me again. Her mother condescended to say a few words, too. Thaw went out of his way to be nice to them, arranged gorgeous parties on board and spent hours talking to Edna's mother.

What a time they must have had panning Stanford White!

When we landed we were in for something we had not expected. Someone had circulated a report that Harry and I were married, and scores of reporters milled around us, wanting to know. We both denied it, but couldn't break loose until we were both exhausted.

In spite of the fact that I wanted only to get to a hotel and find some rest, Thaw insisted on stopping off at a Broadway florist's shop and getting me a mess of flowers. I waited in the cab with my maid, Nellie, and Thaw's valet, Bedford. Then Thaw came back with orchids.

"What hotel have you decided on?" I greeted him.

He hadn't decided on anything it appeared. For some reason he was in an ugly humor and I couldn't get an answer out of him.

"Please, Harry," I begged, "I'm exhausted. Let me go to a hotel and rest."

"All right," he snapped back. "We'll stop at the first hotel we come to."

We stopped at the old Cumberland.

Now, Thaw always kept close tabs on me, but more than ever in New York. So, instead of going to another hotel, he arranged rooms for Nellie and myself and another suite for himself and Bedford at the Cumberland.

Row in Hotel

We thought we had shaken the reporters at the pier, but actually they had followed us up Broadway. After we were shown to our rooms they swarmed into the hotel manager's office, demanding to know whether we were married or not.

Thaw had registered as: "Miss Evelyn Nesbit and maid," and "Harry K. Thaw and valet."

That was all right, but all the fuss of the reporters upset the manager. He stormed into Thaw's rooms and asked furiously whether or not we were married. This threw Thaw already in a mean mood, into a maniacal fit of rage.

"Well," the manager said, "you can't have rooms on the same floor."

"Then we will get out," Thaw came back.

He dashed into my rooms. I saw immediately that he was in one of his worst tantrums.

"Stop unpacking," he commanded Nellie. "We're leaving this hole!"

We went.

The story made the front pages, but it had one pleasant result. It sent Thaw to one hotel and me to another. I'm not the blushing type, but I blushed for days as the papers printed stories about the incident and other anecdotes about Thaw. By inference, at least, they didn't leave much of my reputation.

We started again on the usual merry-go-round of dinners, theaters and late suppers. Thaw lushed champagne every night. I drank very little. I did enjoy a cocktail before dinner, a glass of Bergundy with my meat—and then perhaps a liqueur—but in those days girls didn't drink the way girls do today. Most people drank light wines and good beer, and, in spite of a plentiful supply of liquor everywhere, the gin orgies of recent years were undreamed of.

Thaw Sees White

About this time, Thaw and I began to see a Mrs. Caine, who had been an old friend of my mother. She also knew Thaw. At this time she was a milliner in Boston, but she got down to New York off and on for days at a time. Good old married woman that she was, she still liked dining in the gayer night spots, occupying boxes at first-night performances and sipping an occasional aperetif.

One night Thaw, Mrs. Caine and myself dined at the St. Regis. We were hardly seated when I, glancing around the room, saw Stanford White and his wife seated at a corner table, facing us. I said nothing.

Mrs. Caine did not know Stanford White. I knew she wouldn't understand the way Harry Thaw would behave if he saw Stanford. And while I was trying to think up some way to get Harry out of there I looked at him.

Thaw's mouth had become a thin, hard, white line. He glared at White.

Gun Under Napkin

No one who knew anything about the enmity between these two men ever dreamed of anything worse than a fist fight, which would have been enough. Knowing Thaw's dreadful temper, I lived in constant dread that he might suddenly upset a table or dash from a cab and start a nasty brawl. I had seen him do as much many times when some trifling matter or incident infuriated him, and naturally I knew that if the two men ever met face to face there would be a scene. This even though I knew Thaw had run from many fights he himself started.

While I was shuddering about fist fights, however, Mrs. Caine leaned over and whispered to me:

"Evelyn — what's the matter with Harry? I'm scared to death. He has a revolver under his napkin."

"Good heavens!"

Then I became frozen with fright. For a moment I couldn't think. Then I said to Harry, in deliberate tones:

"If you don't put that gun away I'll leave the table and go back to the hotel."

With one of his quick transitions—as if one picture were lifted from a stack to reveal a contrasting one beneath—Harry flashed a sudden smile and said:

"All right, angels, don't her worry."

And he put the gun back into his pocket.

We soon left. There again was the handwriting on the wall—but I was blind!

Let an old door-spring show why fresh Gulf gas is better!

WHY does stale gas give less mileage? Why does stale gas mean more knock?

Because the highly-volatile "light ends"—the most important parts of gas—have evaporated.

New R-D-R process insures FRESHNESS in Gulf

Only fresh gas gives you these important "light ends." And Gulf Gas is always fresh. Gulf's high-speed delivery system rushes fresh Gulf gas to the pumps. And that gas stays fresh longer, due to Gulf's exclusive R-D-R process—a process that actually delays deterioration.

Try a tankful of fresh Gulf Gas. It doesn't cost a penny more. See if you don't get a more powerful, a smoother running motor.

5 important facts about fresh gas

On the basis of months of experiments made independently by a famous Chemical Laboratory, Gulf offers these findings to motorists.

Fresh Gas starts faster than stale gas.

Fresh Gas gives you more power than stale gas.

Fresh Gas gives you more mileage.

Fresh Gas is higher in anti-knock rating than stale gasoline.

Fresh Gas is cleaner-burning—contains less motor fouling residue than stale gas.

"WHEN THAT OLD DOOR-SPRING WAS NEW," says the Chemical Engineer, "it was full of life. Now it's old...lifeless. Something's gone out of it. And that's exactly what happens to gasoline. As gas grows stale it becomes lifeless...sluggish. Something goes out of it that never returns." So it pays to get FRESH gas—Gulf Gas.

Later in the afternoon the delegates will be guests of the City Planning Commission on a tour of the city, including Schenley Park, the Point and West End bridges, through the Liberty Tubes to Chatham Village, a trip which will take approximately two hours and is under the chairmanship of Mrs. H. D. Stark.

The president's dinner tonight is in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. O. W. Buenting and Mrs. J. E. Crawshaw. Mrs. Nathaniel Spear was hostess at dinner in her home last night for the state board and tomorrow night the Allegheny County League will entertain the same guests at dinner in the Hotel Schenley.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLAN WARDROBE FOR HOT WEATHER

WOMEN WHO make you green-eyed with jealousy by being all prepared for the first heat wave have learned the wise Christmas slogan: Shop early and avoid the rush!

RIGHT NOW is the time to begin planning your summer clothes. Budget your summer buying along with your spring house cleaning. Go through your closet and hang away your woolens and your furs in those splendid mothproof bags the stores are offering. Then start fresh and organize a cotton and linen and sheer silk set of clothes which will take you right through the dog days.

CHOOSING YOUR summer clothes isn't easy. There are so many cheapy-cheapy models to lure you from the straight and narrow path of good style. Expert cutting, fine workmanship and generous amounts of materials are as necessary to a little linen frock as to the handsomest tailored suit. In fact, many of the cottons and linens this year are as intricately handled as the more formal materials. We've grown cotton and linen conscious—one more string to the bow.

TAKE THE redingote outfit on the left. The coat is a beautiful herring-bone linen, firm and heavy, in a rain-washed blue. It's cut to fit the waist snugly, flare over the tops of the arms and join together in the front with a suspender arrangement of bone clips. Very much in evidence is the fine-checked handkerchief linen dress beneath it. This is red and blue on white and the print is repeated in the hat.

AT THE right is a tailored and very jaunty deep blue pique dress with a belted jacket. The skirt is noteworthy, cut with plenty of room for the longest stride, but slim in line. Note the gigantic white pique cuffs, the triple bow and the saddle shoulders.

BUC HURLER'S WORK RANKS WITH BEST

IN SAVING FIRST place for the Pirates by toppling the Phillies while the Giants were beating the Cubs yesterday, Bill Swift showed that he had swung right back into his early stride after the shellacking he received in New York last Friday, his only off day of the season. It wasn't Swift's fault that he didn't gain the distinction of having shut out the heavy-hitting Quakers twice in succession, as but for leaky support he would have held them runless a second time, following his rare feat of blanking them in their own bandbox park on May 1.

Bill Swift

Even as it is, the Pirate right-hander holds a record of having pitched 18 consecutive innings against the Phils without allowing a solitary earned run. That spells some ball hurling, in competition with the most feared slugging outfit in the league. Swift's pitching has compared with the best in the majors this spring. In winning five games against two defeats he has worked against five different clubs. His total of five victories has not been surpassed by any other slabman in either big league so far, and he has allowed an average of only 1.92 earned runs per nine innings.

THE PHILS' END of Monday's box score didn't look normal when it failed to show the name of Ad Liska among the pitchers, but yesterday the submarine resumed his almost daily labors as a relief boxman. Pitching in relief roles for the Quakers means flinging nearly every day, and Liska surely hasn't been doing any shirking. Prior to Monday he worked in six straight games, and with yesterday's resumption counted in he has pitched in seven of the last eight, nine of the last 11, and 11 of the last 14 games played by his club. Of the 27 contests in which the Phils engaged up to today, Liska did part of the pitching in 14, or more than 50 per cent, though he is not yet credited with a victory nor charged with a defeat.

BESIDES THE LACK of a hitting shortstop, an obstacle that may hurt the Giants' chances of staying up around the top in the National League race, is the number of double-headers confronting them. Already the New Yorkers have no fewer than 12 dual bills on their program.

Postponements have made it necessary to book three with Boston, two with St. Louis and one each with Philadelphia and Brooklyn, and there is also a regularly scheduled twin card in St. Louis. Besides there are the usual tandem engagements of Memorial Day, Fourth of July and Labor Day. That's why Bill Terry decided to carry 10 pitchers when he cut his roster to 23 men.

HACK WILSON TRIED his hand as a catcher during a Dodger practice session, and, though not quite as graceful as Al Lopez, did pretty well until he called for a curve and Fred Heimach threw a fast one instead. In spite of that, Hack pronounced the catcher's job the softest on the club.

Watson Clark attributes that verdict to the fact that Wilson wasn't back there long enough. He remarks that if Hack ever started out to catch both games of a double-header, along about the fifth inning of the second game there would be nothing behind the plate but a water hole.

Fred Fitzsimmons

SURVEYING THE PITCHING field, Joe Vila, the New York veteran, finds Fred Fitzsimmons the only hurler in the majors to turn his back to the hitters before delivering the ball. Observers wonder how the Giant flinger can guage his delivery so quickly after turning his face away from the plate.

Few pitchers have used similar methods. The Pirates had one in 1906 in Eddie Karger, who was traded to St. Louis in midseason for Chappy McFarland. An early example was Grasshopper Jim Whitney, with Boston from 1881 to 1885, who, while taking a hop and step in a box 6x4 feet and 50 feet from the plate, momentarily looked at the outfield.

SPEAKING OF DELIVERIES, Vila recalls that the first pitcher to use the windup was Dupee Shaw, a left-hander, who worked for various National League and outlaw clubs in the '80's. Shaw's style was ridiculed in those days, but almost all of the modern slabmen use it.

Tim Keefe, Old Hoss Radbourne and John Clarkson did not wind up before turning the ball loose. They merely raised their arms above their heads, gripping the ball with both hands, as they took a forward step. Kid Nichols, Cy Young, Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson, Three-Finger Brown, Grover Alexander and other great sharpshooters of the past pitched the ball without making themselves look like human windmills. About the longest windup on record was that of Pink Hawley, a Pirate speed pitcher in 1895-96-97.

SOME OF THE best hurdle races last year were run between Jack Keller, of Ohio State, and the late George Saling, of Iowa, In the Ohio State Lantern, Keller pays this tribute to his old rival, who was killed in an automobile accident: "In memoriam—My friend, you have taken that last obstacle in the hurdle race of life. It was a short race for you, but you ran it well. May others be inspired by your courage and your sportsmanlike conduct to do as you have done. Knowing you for so short a time, I have frankly spoken of you as 'a great guy,' and now you are gone. I know the Supreme Coach of the last track team will value you and set you to guide us who falter in our race. With your memory as an everlasting flame burning on high, those who come after you will be striving to reach your high pedestal—in vain. Ave!"

IF YOU GET a ticket marked "ringside" for either of the big heavyweight fights in New York next month you won't be running the usual chance of finding that the seat is located somewhere in New Jersey. The Empire State Athletic Commission finally has given the ringside seat a definite value.

Calling in the promoters of the two shows, the commission notified them that seats outside the twenty-fifth row must not be labeled "ringside." Beyond the twenty-fifth row, all tickets must show that they are for ringside circle, arena or floor seats. To term even the twenty-fifth row a ringside seat is stretching things a bit, but it's better than finding that you've got to use Dan O'Leary for an usher.

THE METRIC SYSTEM will have to go over big at next week's I. C. 4-A meet in Cambridge to silence the opposition of many prominent track men who have been fighting it ever since its adoption in this country was engineered by Gustavus T. Kerby and A. C. Gilbert.

Jimmy McLarnin

One coast coach says the metric measurements are un-American. He says he wouldn't be surprised if eventually the sponsors insist on having the judges speak French or German and demand passports from far western people competing in eastern meets.

REGARDLESS OF WHAT a boxer weighs, the poundage limit of his class governs the weight of the gloves for a ring contest in California. Jimmy McLarnin appears to have lost his fight for the right to wear five-ounce gloves in his world welterweight championship match with young Corbett in Los Angeles on May 29. The California boxing laws provide that boxers weighing less than 145 pounds may wear five-ounce gloves, and that boxers weighing more than 145 pounds must wear gloves not lighter than six ounces. McLarnin contended that inasmuch as he will weigh less than 145 for Corbett he would be within the rule wearing five-ounce gloves, but Dr. Harry Martin and Chaplain Leslie Kelley, two of the three members of the State Boxing Commission, have taken the stand that as the title bout is to be at 147 pounds, the class limit, six-ounce gloves must be worn by both champion and challenger. Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager, is not ready to give in. "Five-ounce gloves are used in all welterweight fights, and that's what McLarnin will wear for Corbett," he insists. "Corbett can wear four-ounce gloves, if he wishes, as far as we are concerned, or he can fight barehanded."

GOLFERS MAY GET PASSES ON INSTALLMENTS

By TOM BIRKS

The business of getting rid of season permits for the North and South county parks golf courses is lagging. Yesterday afternoon the County Comissioners passed a resolution allowing prospective county park golfers to take out permits on the installment plan.

The method adopted calls for a $10 down payment and $5 additional within 30 days, and the balance 30 days later.

Reports to date show that permits are not being taken out in any great number. Figures show the demand fof permits far below the record at this time last year.

PRO STILL UNNAMED

The Commissioners evidently are not going to name a professional for North Park for some time, if their present attitude means anything. The park custodian is arranging for starting times, according to Director Marion.

Next Monday the first pro-amateur tournament of the season will be staged at Hannastown Country Club, where the boys will be the guests of President Jamison.

According to James A. Fownes, chairman of the handicap committee, the handicap cards are coming in very slowly. Players must have a handicap card before they can tee off in next Wednesday's one-day event at South Hills.

STARS TO PLAY HERE

Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood, with their up-to-date caravan, will anchor at the Pittsburgh Field Club one week from tomorrow for an exhibition match with Vincent Eldred and Pete O'Hara. The proceeds, over the guarantee for the visitors, will go to the unemployed fund of the Tri-State Golfers' Association.

NEW GOLF PLAN IGNORES PAR

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—The Handicap Golfers' Association of America, through its president, Max R. Marston, of Philadelphia, has made public its plan to eliminate par as an arbitrary measurement of golf skill in favor of a more flexible, standardized system of handicapping and course rating.

The new system is being worked out in connection with the national handicap championship, sponsored by the association for the first time this year. According to Marston, it is based in general on the existing system used by the Massachusetts, Connecticut and Pennsylvania state golf associations and has been broadened and made foolproof through long study, chiefly by Harold Hayes, of Connecticut.

The seven-point basis for the new handicapping system takes into account (1) the playing distance of the hole, not the yardage on the score card; (2) topography of the course; (3) average condition of greens; (4) any decided slope to the greens; (5) relative width of fairways; (6) direction and strength of prevailing wind; (7) character, quantity and location of traps, bunkers and natural hazards.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: LITTLE OLD NEW YORK—The famous painting of Baby Stuart represents James Stuart, Duke of York, who ascended the throne of England as King James II, in succession to Charles II, his brother. When, in 1664, the Dutch colony of New Netherland was reduced by the fleet of Gov. Nicolls, King Charles II, of England, granted his brother a patent to the colony and named it New York in honor of the Duke and erstwhile Baby Stuart. A FINNY PATRIARCH—The famous Pike of Kaiserslautern in the Palatinate was taken out of the great fishpond called the Kaiserwog in 1400. It was 19 feet long, weighed 350 pounds, and had been tagged in the days of Emperor Barbarossa. A Greek inscription on its golden band was to the effect that it was placed in the pond in 1130. It therefore was 270 years old at the time of its extraction.

RIP THRILLED BY AMAZON

(Robert Ripley, cartoonist who won fame with his "Believe It or Not" drawings, is touring South America by airplane in search of new material. What he sees and hears he is cabling daily to the United States.)

By ROBERT RIPLEY

PARA, Brazil, May 17.—The Pan-American airliner just set me down in Para, by "The River of the Sea," which is a native name for the Amazon.

It is 3,875 miles long. Its basin is the size of Europe and into it flow white-water rivers, black-water rivers, blue-water rivers and brown-water rivers, forming a dirty main stream that extends so far out into the ocean that it is possible to dip a flask of fresh water 100 miles out at sea.

The Amazon is so large that ocean liners can sail 1,000 miles up to the city of Manaos in the heart of South America, where they find a city that not only has a beautiful opera house, but a city that had street cars before New York had them.

And to the northeast of Manaos, in Caracas, Venezuela, there is a university that was built 100 years before Harvard or Yale were founded.

But here I am in Para, a city that is not as great as it used to be because it was founded on rubber, and of recent years the rubber industry has failed to bounce, so its bull ring has been turned into a school, the soap trees have been turned into soap, and, despite the fact that fresh fish are plentiful, they import a liberal supply of dried codfish from Nova Scotia.

However, they still have the "Maxixe." The "Maxixe" is a hot dance in Para. It means "hot pepper," but it is too hot to dance here because Para is situated almost exactly on the Equator.

Tomorrow, we start the "can to can" hop, as it is called by the Panair pilots, meaning that they start when they can see and finish when they can't see.

Believe it or not!

'Explaining' Victory Over Canzoneri Tough for Ramey

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

If you want to make Wesley Ramey, of Grand Rapids, laugh, ask him to tell you how he happened to run afoul of the only knockout of his career, by Pat Igoe, a welterweight, back in 1931.

Ask him how he happened to lose to Steve Halaiko in their first meeting. Ask him about a 10-round draw in his record with Maxie Strub.

But don't—if you value your life—ask him how he came to grab the duke over Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, in their 10-round non-title bout in Grand Rapids, a few weeks ago.

The thing has gone so far it has the young man a bit upset. Overwrought nerves are liable to break down almost any day. As he said yesterday, while preparing to go through a workout in the Pittsburgh Lyceum gymnasium for his 10-round battle with Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, at the Arena, Friday night:

"I always knew you had to alibi defeats—but this is the first time I ever knew a boxer was under compulsion to 'explain' how he happened to beat a favorite. You'd be surprised at the 'dumb' or stupid questions they ask you.

TONY IN CONDITION

"Almost everybody wants to know if Canzoneri was in shape when I beat him. I'll say he was in shape. If he wasn't, I'd hate to meet him when he is in condition. I traveled the fastest 10 rounds of my career against him, and he was putting on steam in the last round in a desperate attempt to come from behind. He knew I was ahead, and I knew it, too, and played it safe, coasting in.

"The papers said I won eight of the 10 rounds. That ought to answer the question they ask as to whether or not I was lucky to get the decision. Maybe it was an upset for Canzoneri to lose. But it's also an upset for me to lose. I've failed to win only three bouts in my entire career. No one seems to consider that. I hope that when I grow old and sprout a beard the boys won't be coming around and saying:

"'Well, now, Wesley, how about that there fight with Canzoneri, or whatever his name was—you know, the champion? Tell us how you come to win it. He was a great champion.'

"Canzoneri hurt me in the first round and again later, but I just kept using the ring and setting a burning pace, and he couldn't catch up to me. I hope they match me with him for the championship."

KNOWS HIS BOXING

Ramey has been here since Sunday. He came in to get accustomed to Pittsburgh, sample its drinking water to make certain it agrees with him, and get the lowdown generally on the situation. He has heard it said there's gold in the hills here for lightweights, and he's been sort o' prospecting around. If he beats Dublinsky, he's supposed to take on the winner of a Tony Herrera-Tracey Cox return go, scheduled for Hickey Park, Millvale, one week from next Monday, in a later Arena feature. After that they may bring in Canzoneri for the survivor of the eliminations.

This young Ramey fellow is a pleasant chap who knows his boxing. Ask him about any of the men in his class and he'll describe their fighting styles to a T, which proves he's a real student of the sport. He says Steve Halaiko, for instance, is a shuffling-in boxer who never changes expression even when he's hurt and gives you no hint of when he's going to lead, doesn't feint or have any other deceptive motions, and is just bad news to fight. He says that when he defeated Johnny Jadick, former junior-weiterweight champion, shortly before winning over Canzoneri, the rangy Jadick couldn't tag him with his right, but kept sticking the fingers of his left hand in his face.

Friday night's bout will be Ramey's third with Dublinsky. The record books record only one other one, but Wesley says they fought twice in Grand Rapids and that he won both times, but he tells you Dublinsky is no chump, as we Pittsburghers well know. For that matter, Ramey is smart enough not to speak ill of anyone in the fight game.

COMISH CALLS MEETING

A meeting of the promoters of the Pittsburgh district has been called for the boxing commission office at 11 a. m. tomorrow to discuss the outdoor season, with four clubs all seeking to run weekly.

Out of the session may come a new merger of the clubs or an arrangement whereby each will run only every other week, unless one or more of them drops out of the field.

Between Rounds

The Vince Dundee-Frankie Goosby bout, arranged for Greenlee Field, June 1, will be staged in the Arena on the North Side on June 8 instead, it was announced today by Lew Raymond, matchmaker of the Arena.

Andy Kosel, of Turtle Creek, wants a return bout with Nat Litfin. He says when he fought Nat at the Garden recently he took the fight on three days' notice.

James (Red) Mason is touting Tommy Freeman to defeat Ted Yarosz when they finally meet in the main bout of the opening show of the outdoor season at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night. He recently handed Jack King in two bouts against Freeman, in each of which Freeman received the decision. Mason, by the way, plans to return to Pittsburgh for the Hans Wagner Day celebration early next month.

Enid Wilson Gains British Golf Final

GLENEAGLES, Scotland, May 17.—(AP.)—Enid Wilson, defending champion, today advanced to the final round of the British women's golf championship with a 5-and-4 victory over Doris Park, tournament medalist.

Miss Wilson will meet Diana Plumpton in the final tomorrow, the latter defeating Diana Fishwick, 1930 titleholder, in the other semi-final match, 1 up, for a startling upset.

Brouillard Wins Over Slaughter

BOSTON, May 17.—(AP.)—Lou Brouillard, former welterweight champion, dropped Sammy Slaughter nine times last night as he outslugged the Terre Haute Negro middleweight for a decisive victory in a ten-round bout at the Arena. Brouillard weighed 159 and Slaughter scaled 159¾.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Our pace-setting Pirates, aside from Capt. Traynor and Fred Lindstrom, still showed depression batting averages today, but there was a better tone among the boys who swish the Looeyville sluggers as a result of a unique performance of yesterday, when the home lads tore up the wet turf of Forbes Field with six doubles, not to mention a home-run sock by Gus Suhr that may have wrecked a seat or two of the rightfield stands.

Anyhow, what I mean to convey is that the Buccos show signs of liquidating their batting slump. It might seem a bit sour to be dwelling on the hitting slump of a team good enough to stand out as the elite in Mr. Heydler's circuit, yet it is a fact of the figures that the swashbuckling Buccaneers are not hitting, for the most part.

Any time you see a Waner hitting around the .250 mark you can figure Oklahoma has gone off the gold standard and Alfalfa Bill is slipping. At this writing Sprout the Younger is below .250 and Brother Paul, who should bat .300 with one arm tied behind his back, has yet to join the charmed circle.

TWO OR NO COUNT

In smacking down the Phillies yesterday by the score of 8 to 4, the Freebooters connected for 10 hits. They won the old ball game in the second and third rounds by smearing Austin Moore for five doubles, each two-sacker being as clean as home plate when Bill Klem gives it a slicking up with his cute brush. Suhr's round-tripper was a dandy drive into the

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

WASHINGTON, May 17.—We are back from a pleasant western trip, so I put the slug on Griff for some dough today. Griff said:

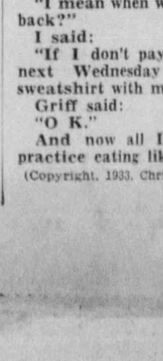
"What's the idea of you needing dough?"

I said:

"Because I'm getting my 3.2 beer on the cuff, and consequently I'm wearing three shirts a day."

Griff said:

"Keep up the good work, but don't bother me."



Nick Altrock

I said:

"But this can't go on forever, as my washerwoman objects."

Griff said:

"If you ask me for less than 10 bucks I'll faint away."

"I said:

"Then I'll revive you with romantic spirits of America. Let me have 15."

Griff said:

"What are you doing with all this money?"

I said:

"I am trying to get it, so far."

Griff said:

"Will you surely pay it back?"

I said:

"Just as sure as Lee took Richmond."

Griff said:

"When?"

I said:

"In 1862."

Griff said:

"I mean when will you pay me back?"

I said:

"If I don't pay you back by next Wednesday I'll eat my sweatshirt with mayonnaise."

Griff said:

"O K."

And now all I got to do is practice eating like a goat.

NATS' HEAVY ATTACK COSTS TRIBE LEAD

SENATORS WIN IN 43-HIT STRUGGLE

Associated Press.

If any modern baseball fans, those of the Ruthian era who prefer base hits to inside baseball, are worried about the domination of the flingers this spring, they have only to turn to Washington for hope.

The Senators and the Cleveland Indians put on a slugfest of near record proportions yesterday as they struggled through 12 long innings before Washington earned a 11-10 victory. The result put the teams into a tie a few points behind the New York Yankees, whose idleness regained for them the American League lead. In the long session the teams made a total of 43 hits, good for 51 bases, and nine pitchers marched off to the showers before Al Crowder finally got the decision over Mel Harder.

NATS GET 27 BLOWS

Washington piled 27 of the blows on top of last Sunday's doubleheader at Chicago, which produced 28 hits and 19 runs against the White Sox. Cecil Travis, recalled from Chattanooga to plug the gap at third left by Ossie Bluege's injury, celebrated his debut by making five singles, getting on base a sixth time through an error and scoring three runs. Luke Sewell likewise gathered five hits, but Joe Kuhel topped them all by hitting a homer, a triple and three singles, driving in the winning run after singles by Buddy Myer and Sewell and an intentional pass to pinch batsman Bluege loaded the sacks.

The St. Louis Browns touched their former mate, Lloyd Brown, and Bob Kline, for 13 hits in 11 frames to beat the Boston Red Sox 3 to 2.

The eastern openers between Detroit and New York and Chicago and Philadelphia were rained out.

BUCS BEAT PHILS

Eastern clubs of the National League began their invasion of the western sector by winning three out of four decisions. Pittsburgh's league leading Pirates were the only home team to win. They rapped Cy Moore, Snipe Hansen and Ad Liska for 10 hits, including six doubles and a homer by Gus Suhr, and beat the Phillies, 8 to 4.

The New York Giants, only a half game behind, came through behind Carl Hubbell's left handed flinging to beat the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 1, despite four errors.

Joe Mowry, just up from the American Association, provided a lot of the punch that enabled the Boston Braves to beat the third-place Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 3. He accounted for two runs with a single and a triple. The Brooklyn Dodgers kept St. Louis down in the fourth notch, just a point behind Cincinnati, by rallying for two runs in the ninth inning and a 6-to-5 victory.

Shortstop Eric McNair has been added to the list of Philadelphia Athletic cripples. He will be laid up for at least two weeks with a pulled tendon in his throwing arm.

BUC HITTING IMPROVED

stands, the other three blows being singles.

Bill Swift turned in a fine slab effort to hold his team on the top position. Tony Piet and Arky Vaughan put Scranton Bill in a hole in the first round as they kicked over three tallies, but Bill didn't mind this a bit; moreover, the same two greyhounds of the second base area came through with a lot of good wallops to help clinch Swift's fifth victory of the season.

SWIFT'S BIG INNING

Bill had slab magic in the eighth when he flagged down the Phils' terrible wrecking crew with the victory at stake. The Buccos were leading by three runs as the eighth started. Fullis opened with a single by Daredevil Dick Bartell smacked a double to the left-field fence. Fullis stopping at third.

Klein, Davis and Hurst lugged their big bats plateward, but the Scranton hurler did not scare at the cars. Swift made Chuck hoist a pop fly to Traynor. He was still up to his neck in trouble, but by keeping the ball "outside" to Davis he forced that husky to loft a foul to Suhr. Hurst connected for what would have been a three-run homer in his beloved Baker "demi-tasse," but in a real ball park it was just a putout when P. Waner backed to deep field for a catch.

Chilly Sauce

Suhr, Vaughan, Lindstrom, P. Waner, Piet and L. Waner were the two-base hit makers in the order named.

An unusual feature of the cluster of doubles was noted in their low-flying trajectory. Each of the six was a screaming liner and they were smacked to right, center and left.

Suhr came out of his batting slump with a homer and a double. He missed another two-sacker by inches on his foul drive off Hansen.

Ad Liska is a reminder of Carl Mays. Suhr timed one of his submarine shots beautifully and the rocket rode into the stands.

Chuck Klein had a bad day against Swift. Chuck went up "4-for-0" as the diamond boys hand it out.

Tony Piet had a big day after starting with an error. The Polish star was on the sacks four times through a double, 2 single, a walk and a sock in the ribs. He scored twice and stole a base.

Early Showdown Seen at State

Western Pennsylvania alumni of Penn State College today were reported taking sides in the controversy raging between Nate Cartmell, who has resigned as track coach of the Nittany Lions, and Hugo Bezdek, physical director of the institution.

With students at the college signing petitions and the alumni girding their loins, a showdown in the long-standing feud is expected within a short time. Either Bezdek long a storm center with the alumni, or Cartmell will carry his point.

If the latter wins, it is understood he will withdraw his resignation and continue as track coach. He announced his resignation here at the Pitt-State track meet last Saturday.

CANADA PICKS CUP LINEUP

MONTREAL, Que., May 17.—(AP.)—Dr. Jack Wright, of Vancouver and Gilbert Nunns, of Toronto were selected to play singles for Canada in the second ind Davis Cup tennis matches against the United States, starting here tomorrow.

Although no announcement was made as to doubles it was expected that Dr. Wright and Marcel Rainville, diminutive Montreal star, would be chosen.

Ellsworth Vines, American champion, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas, will carry the singles burden for the United States with George Lott, of Chicago and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia.

The draw for the first two singles matches will be made today.

Given only an outside chance to defeat the United States, the hopes for victory by the Canadian team were further weakened today by reports of dissatisfaction among the players.

The French language newspaper, Le Canada, says Rainville, probably Canada's best known internationalist who was not used in the singles against Cuba last week, threatened to resign from the team unless he was given another opportunity to play Nunns, who replaced him.

Whatever glory and acclaim goes with the winning of the city's inter-collegiate track and field championship today belongs to the lads out at Pitt, as it has each year since 1910, when Carnegie Tech won its first and only victory over the Panthers.

The Dukes, who never have cut themselves much cake in the track sport, have yet to meet either Pitt or the Tartans, so the championship always has been a Pitt and Carnegie affair.

KELLER HELD BACK

Yesterday, the Panthers took both the varsity and freshman engagements. The Panther varsity won, 95 to 40, which isn't exactly close, and the freshmen, 97 to 29. The varsity score might ve been greater had Coach Carl Olsen, of Pitt, not chosen to hold back his ace, Capt. Bill Keller. Bill probably could have scored in at least three events and won two of them, but after running a 50 7-10 second 400, Olsen sent him into the dressing room. Keller had hoped to take a crack at the district 880-yard record, but Olsen wants him to be at the peak for the meet with Notre Dame Saturday.

Tom Coulter, of Tech, was the high point man, with a first in the 220-yard sprint, a second in the low hurdles and a second in the 100.

The Panthers scored sweeps in the quarter mile, two-mile, shot put and javelin throw.

O'DELL WINS VAULT

Howdy O'Dell, who is improving day by day at his pole vaulting, cleared 12 feet to take the event, which is exactly six inches higher than Howdy ever dreamed he would go.

In the freshman meet, Barnum, star of the Panther Cub squad, scored one point less than the entire Tech team, winning five firsts and one second place. He won the high and low hurdles, the hammer throw, shot put and javelin and was second in the discus.

Hurst, in winning the pole vault, was the only Tartan Plebe to gain a victory.

Bush's Condition Still Is Critical

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—(INS.)—Physicians today said the condition of Owen (Donie) Bush, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was still critical. Bush is suffering from bronchial pneumonia at his home here.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—The Toronto Scots, champions of Canada, and the Stix, Baer and Fuller team of St. Louis, United States titleholder, will meet for the soccer championship of North America at Soldier Field June 11. The match will be a World's Fair feature.

LONDON.—(AP.)—England made a clean sweep of her Davis Cup tennis series with France as Fred Perry and J. W. (Bunny) Austin won the final two singles matches yesterday. Perry outclassed A. Grahn, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4, while Austin disposed of G. Grotenfelt easily, 6-0, 6-1, 6-4.

ST. LOUIS.—(AP.)—Pitchers John Ogden and Frank (Dutch) Henry, obtained by the St. Louis Cardinals from Cincinnati in a trade which also brought Leo Durocher to the Cards, have been released outright to the Rochester team of the International League. The Cardinal management also announced the release, on option, of Catcher Lewis to Columbus, of the American Association.

WHEELING, W. Va.—(AP.)—R. R. (Tuss) Edwards, of Martins Ferry, O., was reappointed today athletic coach for the fifth consecutive year by the Linsly Military Institute Board. Edwards was an end on the Washington and Jefferson elevens several years ago and become noted for his placement kicking.

GREENSBURG, Pa.—Greensburg High School will enter 10 of its 1933 Westmoreland County championship track squad in the annual W. P. I. A. L. track meet in the Pitt Stadium Saturday. Included in the local team will be Dowden, who broke the county shot put mark to win that event; C. Kopesak, second in the shot put, who also bettered the former county mark; R. Brooks and H. Brooks, hurdle winners; A. Kopesak, county discus champion; Medved, in the javelin event; Fox, in the hurdles; Sloan, Martin and Wolfe in the dashes.

CHICAGO.—(INS.)—Banishment of three jockeys from Sportsman's Park here brought an announcement today from Presiding Steward Sam C. Nuckols that their suspension was the final move in breaking up an alleged "fixing ring."

Revocation of the license of Jockey Lester Dye following his ride on Semester started an inquiry which resulted in the suspension of Jockeys M. Dupuy and D. Burney. Officials said their investigation indicated questionable methods had been used by the trio.

SANTA MONICA, Cal.—(AP.)—Ollie Dutra, National P. G. A. champion, leaves today for a summer of golfing that includes his first international campaign as a member of the Ryder Cup team.

BOBBY JONES' GOLF

By BOBBY JONES

Only Golfer Who Has Won U. S. and British Amateur and Open Championships in the Same Year

Here are a few questions selected from a number propounded by Hal Westmore, of Spokane, Wash. These appeal to me as likely to be in the minds of a number of average golfers.

1. "The scratches on the bottoms of my woods, caused by scraping the ground as I hit, do not run at right angles to the club's face, but go from the toe (front) toward the heel (rear). How do yours run?"

Bobby Jones

Any number of players have worried over the direction taken by the marks left on the bottoms of their drivers by the red or yellow wood tees now in popular vogue. This is really a better test than the scratches on fairway clubs, for the latter are used for various shots, and one cannot know which swing was responsible for each particu ar scratch.

I have heard numerous players use these marks to point an argument against the principle of hitting the ball "from the inside out" or "exactly along the line of intended flight." When they find that the clubs of the first-class pros always exhibit marks beginning at about the center of the face and curving out towards the toe of the club, they declare this to be conclusive evidence that the stroke to some degree has cut across the line of flight from the outside.

As a matter of fact, no such conclusion is justified. It must be remembered that at this stage the head of the club is moving at great speed and the shock of impact is terrific. This force twists the head on the shaft and to some extent maintains the face of the club in proper alignment during contact. The club cannot restore itself until the ball has left the face. Similar marks will be made on a clean driver by a stroke which we know has not cut across the ball.

2. "I continually hit slightly under the ball. You say the left arm should be straight at impact, yet should hang comfortably at address. If the left arm is not absolutely straight at address, it seems that straightening it at impact would bring the clubhead under the ball unless the body is drawn back. Is your left arm absolutely straight when beginning your backswing? If not, when does it become straight?"

My left arm is not absolutely straight at the beginning of the backswing; as I have said, it hangs comfortably from the shoulder. It becomes reasonably straight before it reaches the top of the swing, and perfectly straight in the stretching which occurs as the left hip starts to turn back towards the ball. It is perfectly straight from that point until it relaxes after impact.

A NATURAL PULL

There is no necessity for the body to be "drawn back" at impact in the sense of pulling the head up or of falling away from the ball. The head should remain on the same level, the needed extension being provided by the hip turn and the elevation of the left shoulder. Remember that at impact the hips have turned around far past their location at address.

3. "When you say the left arm should be straight at impact, do you mean it should be so straight that the left elbow is locked, or that it should be comfortably straight?"

The left arm should be perfectly straight at impact, but the straightness is that of extension rather than of locking the elbow. There is a distinct sensation of a pull extending up the left side through the left arm to the club. The left arm must be straight in order to communicate this pull to the hands.

PITT AND TECH NETTERS CLASH

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

If by some miraculous turn of the weather neither rain nor wet grounds interferes with hostilities, the city college net championship should be pretty well decided within the next couple of days. Pitt and Carnegie Tech set things in motion by tangling on the Tartan lot this afternoon. Tomorrow Duquesne invades the Skibo stronghold, while on Friday the Dukes visit the Panther lair.

Inasmuch as Carnegie and Duquesne have already engaged in a deadlock on the Bluff and it is doubtful whether Pitt's postponed home fracas with Tech will be rescheduled, it will be seen that any squad capable of annexing two victories in the impending trio of contests should have a pretty nearly unbreakable clutch on the mythical crown.

Word from Russ Unger, boss of Mount Lebanon racquet destinies for the past several years, has it that the Lebanonians are definitely out of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-City League race for 1933. Inability to secure home courts led the Mountmen to their resolution to withdraw temporarily from competition.

Unger and Neal Rumsey have been working on a proposition to start a new Mount Lebanon Tennis Club with its own plant, but the deal cannot go through in time for the impending campaign, which gets under way just 10 days hence.

Meanwhile the 1932 aggregation will scatter, probably as follows: E. A. Knoche to Stanton Heights, John Brown and Eddie Alcorn to Edgewood, and Unger and perhaps Alcorn to College Avenue.

Mount Lebanon's defection leaves the first division of the Inter-Club loop one crew shy of its customary quota of eight. It is quite possible that the gap may be filled by the elevation of College Avenue to the upper sector.

STOCKS PRESS FORWARD ON TRADE GAINS

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP.)—Favorable corporate and trade news, together with a hopeful interpretation of Chancellor Hitler's address, was accompanied by strength in the financial markets today.

In shares, several issues advanced 1 to 5 points. Bonds were firm, and such staples as wheat and cotton were moderately higher. Directors of American Telephone maintained the boom time dividend of $9 a share annually, and the stock rose some 5 points. The advance in shares embraced all major groups.

After advancing in the early trading, the market churned around for a time coincident with news of Chancellor Hitler's address, but as banking quarters decided the German Chancellor's remarks still left the way open for constructive decisions at Geneva, as well as the London conference, and after announcement that American Telephone directors had ordered the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25, prices advanced further.

It was notable that the share and staple markets ignored strength of dollars in foreign exchange dealings. In the earlier stages of the current advance, the level of the dollar had been regarded by traders as a measure of inflation, and they had shown a disposition to sell shares and speculative commodities, whenever the dollar advanced.

But with business news showing such major railroads as Pennsylvania and New York Central with carloadings above a year ago, with electric power production well over the level of last year, and steel ingot production estimated at 35 per cent of capacity, a level at which it is estimated most companies can at least break even after a year of severe deficits, Wall street seemed less interested in inflationary prospects.

WEATHER AIDS GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO, May 17. — Grain prices opened higher today on reports of unwelcome rains in parts of the corn belt and adverse conditions for spring wheat seeding in Canada.

Opening 1⅛@⅝c higher, wheat afterward held near the initial range. Corn started 1⅛@½c advance, and subsequently rose further.

Increased buying of wheat later resulted from strength displayed in securities and in cotton. A rise of about a cent a bushel in the corn market was also a bullish incentive as to wheat.

Corn traders gave chief attention to heavy downpours in Illinois last night. Oats prices followed corn. Provisions advanced with hog values.

GREATEST GOLD HOARDER NOW GOVERNMENT

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, May 17.—We now have a monetary gold stock of over $4,300,000,000, which is just about the same as a year ago. This is a very large sum, and it is ample, in the opinion of most students, to support all the money and credit we can possibly use to advantage.

There are still a few hundred millions of gold and gold certificates being hoarded by private individuals, probably about half the total of $1,200,000,000 which was "in circulation at the end of February."

The great bulk of our large gold holdings, however, is now being hoarded by the government. Those are the exact words for it. Our treasury will not pay gold out, either as a medium of circulation or as interest on government bonds.

We will not use the gold ourselves. We will not let others use it. What is it good for? What is the government going to do with it? Probably no closely similar situation has ever existed.

BELONGED TO PEOPLE

We have been accustomed to think of our monetary gold supply as held by the Treasury in trust as a reserve for the nation's monetary and credit system. Gold certificates, United States notes and Federal Reserve notes were claims for gold. Government bonds were payable, principal and interest, in gold. Thus the gold in the Treasury belonged to the people.

Now this gold belongs to us only in the sense that it does not belong to any one else. We cannot get any of it. Not only have gold certificates been retired, but Federal Reserve notes are being replaced by Federal Reserve bank notes, which are not backed by any gold. The government has even refused to pay its bond interest in gold.

Nor does this situation seem to have been necessary. Foreigners had balances which could be withdrawn amounting to perhaps $600,000,000. That would still leave us plenty. The greatest danger was that our own citizens hoard so much gold that the Treasury would not have enough, and on March 8, $1,429,901,000 in gold and gold certificates were "in circulation."

PURPOSE QUESTIONED

Now what is the government going to do with its gold hoard? We must assume that it has some purpose in impounding and hanging on to our gold.

I think that the impression is growing that the final answer hinges on a world settlement of international debts, tariffs, and currencies.

Owing to trade dislocation and debts, the nations of the world have been struggling to get and hold gold. As a creditor nation, we got a large part. Several nations were forced to abandon their attempts to stay on the gold standard, and sought to make a virtue of necessity by so manipulating their paper currencies that they could gain some temporary advantage in trade, at the same time threatening not to pay some their debts.

In this country, the usual depression demand for cheap dollars arose from farm debtors, greatly reinforced by the "paper losses" of numerous former speculators. But this would not have been decisive, I think, had it not been for the foreign debt situation which led to the breakdown of gold settlements among nations.

So we may doubt if the use of the government's gold hoard will be determined until the future relation between the dollar and pound and franc is settled. Meanwhile, it is a frozen asset.

We will not even know how many dollars it represents until we know for sure how much is to be put into the standard dollar of the future.

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER II.

Early one morning, eight days out of Sydney, when the light of the waning moon high overhead drenched everything in silver, we came upon the little island of Samarai. Its beauty was unearthly in the moonlight. A group of other and tinier atolls of the Louisiades dotted the water about it, their pale white beaches running out toward reef and gently lapping sea. Under the moon, low grass huts cast still shadows. There was not a light, not even in the bungalows of Samarai snuggled against the hill in the center of the island. But in the harbor riding lights shone bravely from schooner masts, the red reflections stabbing deep into the quiet water. Gradually the false dawn lighted the horizon, and with it the breathless peace seemed reluctantly to lift from the atolls. Day brought its own flagrant beauty, but never again—never—have I recaptured the sense of mysterious loveliness that was mine upon first beholding Samarai.

Samarai is, even in broad daylight, a strangely beautiful outpost of the world, set in an emerald sea, and is an important concentrating station for copra, pearl-shell, beche-de-mer, all the products of the South Pacific. It is a little island; you can walk completely around it in less than 30 minutes. A broad dirt road, gratefully shaded by casuarinas and flowering trees, follows down to the wharf, or bridge. There are two hotels, a half-dozen government buildings and stores, a mission station, a general postoffice, and twenty-odd bungalows here at Samarai. The bungalows are low, red-roofed, clapboard buildings, exceedingly comfortable, snuggled against the hill that rises, curiously, in the center of this coral island.

As instinctively as homing pigeons, the Marsina's passengers made for the "house-drink." Native women, who are called marys, passed by us, their soft grass skirts swaying gently with every movement of the hips. As they walked the muscles of their half-naked bodies played visibly beneath their satin-smooth skin. More often than not the Louisiade women are tattoed from ankles to forehead with a delicate lace-work pattern, and strings of bright shells fall over their breasts. Their bodies are beautiful, but frequently their faces, with the rotting, betel-reddened teeth, are shockingly ugly.

A STRANGE SIGHT

Samarai is a mosaic of gay color, set in the jade cloisonne of the sea. Recruited boys—"boy" here often meaning "man"—in laplaps of bright calico or sateen wrapped tightly around their hips and extending to the knee, rivaled the giant hibiscus flowers in brilliance. Armlets, so tight that they seem to sink an inch into the flesh and to prevent all possibility of blood circulation, are bedecked with flaming flowers, as is also the fuzzy wool. Earlobes are extended to the shoulder, and behind each ear is jauntily stuck another hibiscus blossom. Sunk into the mop of grass (pidgin for hair) is a carved and highly colored comb, with teeth seven inches long. Bands of bright seeds or imported beads encircle throats.

Back at the bridge I saw a strange and pitiful sight—the wildest creature I have ever laid my eyes on, a tall, thin, unbroken savage, clad in merely the briefest of filthy loin-cloths and carrying in his hands a bow and arrow. He seemed utterly bewildered by the activity of this tiny settlement. I leveled my camera. He saw me and with a cry bolted into one of the copra sheds near by; nor could he be coaxed or commanded out. He was a fresh labor recruit from the hinterland of Papua, who had been persuaded by a few beads, a knife, and perhaps a fragment of mirror to sign himself away ("make paper") for a term of two years as a plantation laborer. And he was terrified and perhaps homesick, a wild animal out of his natural habitat.

Not far from Samarai lies the little coral island of Sudest, which has been ruled like a tiny empire for more than thirty years by a white woman, Mrs. Maloney. Forty years ago there was a great gold rush to Papua, and among the prospectors out of Ireland went Mr. and Mrs. Maloney and a partner. The gold rush petered out, and at length the Maloneys and their partner were virtually alone on the island of Sudest. At last the partner sold out his claim to them, and returned to Ireland to enjoy the fruits of his labors. Shortly after this Maloney died. This left his widow and several children in command of a South Pacific island, with close to fifteen hundred Stone-Age natives to handle.

RULES WITH IRON HAND

Mrs. Maloney carried on. Her natives still brought her gold dust at odd intervals; she bought and sold copra and beche-de-mer; she navigated her own schooners; she ruled her empire with an iron but understanding hand, and without interference from the government. No missionary ever tried his hand at converting Sudest kanakas. Her children grew up healthy and intelligent, and when the time came they exchanged their mother's tutoring for higher academic education in Australia.

By noontime Samarai was insufferably hot. At length, from the bridge of the Marsina, I watched Jazz Williams, the skipper, navigate us through myriad islands and reefs that would have ripped our ship to pieces had we struck one of them. The sea was ultramarine, shading to mauve and then to jade where a reef rose close to the surface, becoming pale-green near the beach and then cream-colored where the water foamed over jagged coral. The water was a garden of sea anemones. And I was caught up only with the beauty of it all—too new yet to everything here to get any glimpse of the death's-head behind the rainbow veil. No account of the atolls and sea and sky of the South Pacific can ever do justice to their physical beauty.

Two days later we steamed along Blanche Bay, with New Britain's brooding mountains looking down upon us, into the volcano - guarded harbor of Rabaul. Here, for me, the strange life in the South Pacific began, and for nothing in the world would I exchange the year that followed.

POLYGLOT HUMANITY

South of the equator and north of Australia, in that remote part of the world known vaguely as Melanesia, lies New Guinea. The world at large hasn't taken much notice of this place. If it thinks of it at all, it is probably as the place where head-hunters live and missionaries perhaps do not. Before the World War the large archipelago belonged to Germany, and was known as the Bismarck Archipelago and Kaiser Wilhelm Land. Post-war redistribution of territory has given these erstwhile German colonies over to Australia to govern, and they have been renamed unimaginatively the "Mandated Territory of New Guinea."

At the cross-roads of New Guinea lies Rabaul, the territorial capital. It is a most beautiful, rather reprehensible little port lying four degrees south of the equator. Here live about 300 white souls (35 of them women) and perhaps an equal number of Chinese and Malays. Many times outnumbering white masters and Celestials are the natives, flamboyant and half-naked, for the most part happy, as all are happy who have not tasted of knowledge.

Here in occidental Rabaul is a polyglot handful of humanity, made up of adventurers, seekers of oblivion, failures in the world of alert competition, expatriates of many nations.

VOLCANO STANDS GUARD

Rabaul itself is a wanton, exotic beauty fallen upon evil days—a wanton with crimson flowers in her hair and tawny skin and passionate languorous eyes. All men who touch at her shores are her lovers. Most often the price of lingering with her is their manhood. And, when she is done with them, there is no place else in all the world for them.

Of course I did not see all this as I leaned on the rail of the Marsina while we moved slowly along the New Britain coast. What I did see as we rounded Gazelle Peninsula into Blanche Bay and steamed up the shoreline fringed with plantations and jungles was a lovely landlocked harbor guarded by a volcano, with a forbidding background of mountain ranges. In its shadow lay schooners and one or two old 500-ton steamers that tramp around collecting copra and pearl-shell. They reeked of beche-de-mer and copra. They are familiar with the islands from Samarai to the Tasmans. Native outriggers wove in and out. (Continued Tomorrow)

Summary

Alone and lost to the world, Margaret Matches leaves New York on what proves to be one of the most amazing and hazardous journeys ever attempted by a white woman.

Today she tells of her trip from Sydney, Australia, to Rabaul, where, on a small island, the roads of the world cross. She also tells of her experiences among the savages of New Guinea and the Admiralty Islands, of her strange contacts with curious people in far-away places and of many other instances during the course of her fascinating trek through a savage paradise.

UNDER THE COSSACK'S LASH

Alexander III, ascending the Russian throne of his assassinated father, Alexander II, soon reversed the latter's liberal policy to purest autocracy, a policy continued by Nikolas II, who became Czar in 1894. The reforms were swept away. Peasants who showed signs of revolt were forced to till the fields of the landowners under Cossack guards. (World's History).

CORPSES OF STRIKERS SHOT AT THE LENA MINE, SIBERIA, 1912

Stern measures of the Russian government at the start of the Twentieth century led to revolts among peasants and workmen. The bloodiest were those of 1905, preparing for the great revolution of 1917. Above is the punitive work of the government shown to discontented workers on strike. (World's History).

RASPUTIN—'THE MAN OF GOD'

A former peasant, he had great influence over the last Russian Czar Nikolas II and empress. Shortly before overthrow of Czarism he was murdered, the cause of it still being a mystery. (World's History.)

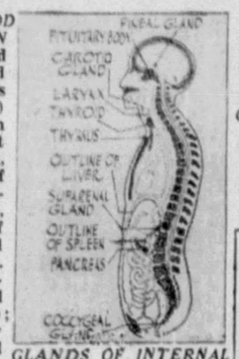
HUMAN BLOOD CIRCULATION

The blood loses (marked —) or gains (marked +) materials in different organs. A, arterial side of heart; V, venous side. B, capillaries of villi (+ digested food); C, capill. of liver (— excess food. + food if necessary); D, kidney (— urea and water); E, muscle cells and F, brain cells (— food and oxygen + CO2 and urea and other wastes); G, capill. around sweat glands (— water, salts and CO2); I, capill. of air sac (— CO2 and water, + oxygen). (Caldwell, Skinner and Tietz: Biological Foundations of Education). (Science).



GLANDS OF INTERNAL SECRETION

CONDUIT WIRING (Science)

Left: Steel conduit box to which the rigid steel conduit pipes containing the insulated electric wires are fastened. The conduit pipes are lined with asphalt treated paper. Right: Flexible steel conduit (Greenfield), single strip, A, and double strip, B, type. It is easier to install than the rigid pipes, but does not protect against moisture as well. PUDDLING FURNACE—TO MANUFACTURE WROUGHT IRON

A reverbatory furnace (roof reflects flame onto the hearth) with an iron oxide lining on top of firebrick, over which pig iron is charged and stirred by the "puddler," who uses an iron bar, "rabbler." Silicon, manganese, carbon and part of the phosphorus burn and go into slag. (Chemistry).

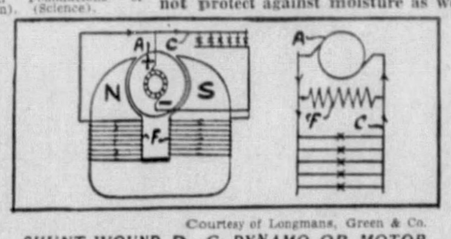
SERIES-WOUND DIRECT CURRENT (D. C.) DYNAMO OR MOTOR

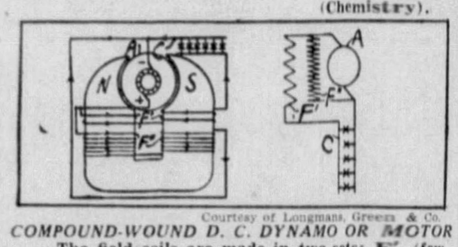
It is used for generating constant current and for railway motors. The field winding F (producing the magnetic field), armature windings A and the outside circuit C are connected in series. The total current flows through the field coils, made from large wire. Decrease in resistance (or increase in load) of the outside circuit increases the magnetizing current and the generated electromotive force.



Courtesy of Longmans, Green & Co.

SHUNT-WOUND D. C. DYNAMO OR MOTOR

The field coils, F—many turns of small wire—are in shunt to the armature coils A. Only part of the generated current will pass through F, which is under the same potential difference as A. A decrease in resistance of the external circuit will also decrease that part of the current going through the field coils, hence decrease the generated electromotive force; an increase of the external resistance will increase e. m. f. (reversed as by the series machine). At the right is a simple diagram of the shunt wound machine.



Courtesy of Longmans, Green & Co.

COMPOUND-WOUND D. C. DYNAMO OR MOTOR

The field coils are made in two sets: F' (few turns of large wire) in series and F'' (many turns of small wire) in shunt to the armature coils A, and also to the outside circuit, C. A change in the resistance of the outside circuit has little effect on the generated e. m. f. (Shunt and series field winding balance each other's effect). Hence, compound-wound machines are generally used. At the right is a simple diagram. (Thomaelen: Electrical Engineering).

MAN PUNSHING TOGETHER IRON PARTICLES

The resulting "ball" is withdrawn and squeezed to remove the slag, then rolled to a "muck bar." This is cut, piled into bundles, reheated and rolled to the "merchant bar" or single refined wrought iron. By repeating the operation, the double refined iron is made.

Wrought iron is soft and tough, can be forged while hot and bent while cold without breaking. Left: Photomicrograph of wrought iron (after Greaves and Wrighton) showing ferrite and slag particles (dark). Wrought iron contains only a few hundredths of one per cent of carbon. (Rosenholtz: Ferrous Metallurgy).

Heap Big Medicine

Just when we legislators thought we had everything working as smoothly as a spoon in gravy we get knocked galleywise by a new climax.

By judicial and benevolent postscripts we had the theory and practice of beer sale drawn as fine as an ant's toe-nail.

Everything was as lovely as an orchid on a shoulder-strap.

Now, we discover that the glorious old ban has been eliminated from the oath of Hippocrates. And that the family doctor can enscribe all the whisky prescriptions in the world.

Under the newest law doc can stake each patient to 30 bottles of liquor a month. That's a quart a day. And guaranteed to keep the doctor away. Until next month.

The law leaves the matter up to the doctor's judgment. Which judgment has been very poor on hoss races, championship fights and the stock market.

When your nose has lost the first blush of youth, when your capillary tremors are singing on the vine, when your nerves are twitching like whiskers in the breeze and your constitution is all jittery preambles, you can step forth to the neighborhood scientist and say:

"Doc, I need a tonic. Don't recommend a spoonful when I require a cloudburst. How about a homeopathic dose of 30 quarts while waiting for lunch to be served in the laughing room?"

Doc writes out a delicate prescription for 30 full imperial quarts and you hire an express wagon to pack your medicine from the corner drugstore.

That's what we would call being sick. One quart will make you a tap dancer. Two quarts will qualify you for the Olympic broad jumping team and 30 make you go through the motions of tying bundles without paper and without the aid of twine.

Although we know that the doctors are thoroughly within the law we ask them to step lightly on those 30-quart orders.

The old law was that a patient was limited to one pint every 10 working days. With 30 quarts a month there ain't going to be no work.

Doctors, let's put on our green eye shades and talk this thing over in some solarium.

Not Convincing

The Weight of the Evidence Is That the Spoils System Still Prevails in the City Administration.

The Sun-Telegraph suggested that if the merit system rather than the spoils system ruled in the city administration Patrolman George H. Puff would be in line for promotion as a reward for the zeal and intelligence he showed in the capture of two of the four convicts who escaped from the Western Penitentiary three weeks ago.

The promotion of Puff to the position of detective is announced.

Unfortunately, however, any hope that Mayor John S. Herron has changed his political philosophy is shattered by the fact that along with Puff 13 others have been appointed as detectives, and most of them are political henchmen of the Coyne machine, and were appointed after a conference with Senator James J. Coyne.

The weight of the evidence is that the spoils system still prevails.

Mental Hospital Needed

A Plea Not to Send the Insane to Jail Shows the Desirability of a Psychiatric Institution

There is talk of a special session of the Legislature to enact humanitarian legislation which the Legislature neglected at the recent session. If such a session is called, its program should include the proposal for the building of a state psychiatric hospital in Pittsburgh, on the site donated for the purpose on the University of Pittsburgh campus.

We are reminded of the need of this hospital by an appeal that has just been issued by Dr. William C. Sandy, director of the bureau of mental health in the State Department of Welfare. It is a plea to "end the deplorable practice in some communities of detaining in jails mental patients who have committed no crime, pending the completion of commitment papers to a mental hospital."

Dr. Sandy asks that such patients be sent to general hospitals instead of to prison.

The proposed psychiatric hospital would be just the place for these cases, for the plans call for an institution to which borderline or doubtful patients may be committed for observation and diagnostic study and treatment; that is, it is to be a place of temporary sojourn.

They Have Grit

Youths in the Forest Camps Face Discomfort With Characteristic American Cheerfulness

Cause for pride will be found in the grit and cheerfulness shown by the young men working in the camps of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the Pennsylvania state forests.

Three thousand of these boys, many of them city youths without camping experience, were sent to 19 Pennsylvania camps during the past week after only three weeks of conditioning and hardening at an army camp.

They found the forests drenched with rain and the forest roads so muddy that the trucks in many cases had to be abandoned and the supplies carried into the camps by hand. There was a temporary scarcity of clothing, blankets, food and warmth.

Yet with characteristic American optimism the boys joked about their discomfort.

Jobs for the Blind

Persons Without Eyesight Fill Many Remunerative Positions in Pennsylvania.

A North Side man who feared he was going blind wrote a note Monday, saying he did not wish to be a burden to his family, then killed himself.

The blind are not necessarily burdens to their families, and least of all in Pennsylvania.

Mark M. Walter, director of the bureau of rehabilitation in the State Department of Labor and Industry, asserts that Pennsylvania has helped more blind persons to obtain paying positions than any other state in the Union.

Since the organization of the bureau in 1920 it has trained 879 men and women with vision defects to obtain remunerative jobs.

The misfortune involved in blindness is not to be minimized; but may not be as bad as imagined.

Autoists' Responsibility

At Last Something Is Done to Require Payment for the Damage They May Do.

A careless autoist may send you to the hospital or damage your property; yet if he has no money or you are unwilling to sue he may evade paying for the harm he has done.

Justice demands that persons shall not be permitted to drive automobiles unless they are financially able to pay for any damage they may do. This is the principle back of the agitation for compulsory liability insurance.

It is gratifying to learn that Pennsylvania has at last taken a step in this direction. Gov. Gifford Pinchot has signed a law which requires autoists whose licenses have been revoked or suspended to furnish proof of financial responsibility before they can regain permission to drive.

Fishing Worms and Rain

The Department of Internal Affairs Gives a Small Boy Some Interesting Information

The Department of Internal Affairs at Harrisburg reports that it received a letter from a small boy at this end of the State, inquiring if fishing worms came out of the clouds with rain.

We like the spirit shown by the department in answering the letter.

The boy was told that most worms found on streets and sidewalks after heavy rains have been "washed out" of the ground and not "washed down" from the clouds. But, it was added, it is conceivable that small cyclonic disturbances might pick up worms and other light objects, carry them some distance and then drop them.

Not long ago, the boy was informed, dirt and refuse picked up by the wind in Africa during a tornado rained down in Italy.

The young man's question was not silly, and showed a commendable [illegible] a members[illegible]iveness.

Beating Our Swords Into Junk Heaps? -:- By Nelson Harding

When on the blacksmith's anvil
We hear his hammer pound
It usually has for us
A cheerful, pleasant sound.

But when he's breaking weapons
The sound grates on the ear
And passers-by must protest
In anger and in fear.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 17.—James Huneker would be pleased with the return of the old literary flavor to his Fourteenth street haunt, Luchow's. It's not as yet what it was in the days it inspired the "Down Where the Wurzburger Flows" song, but a mellowness permeates the dark-timbered gloom. And it is packed to the guard rails.

In a corner Dudley Field Malone dimpled into his usual chubby smile as he lifted a pewter tankard. The same corner, incidentally, where Huneker heckled bright toss-pots of his time into dawn discussions of insoluble problems. With Victor Herbert beaming benignly over a seidel.

Fannie Hurst seemed the center of exuberant talk at another table, and Theodore Dreiser, flaunting his white crest high, strode through the room in the wake of a vital, distinguished company. One missed, however, the high cheer of old Fritz's "Vell, how iss de eppitite this evening?"

Sprinkled about, too, were Nathan Burkan, Karl Kitchen, Joe Moore, Dick Berlin and Ray Lillibridge. A genial aura, yet there's still a strain to recapture the fictitious fellowship that once made Luchow's, Jannsens and other foamy citadels the delightfully care-free havens they were.

The Hofbrau, on a Broadway corner in the 30's, was another tavern that specialized in sweating steins and close barbershop harmony. One of the town's humorous touches was offered by it two days after a declaration of war on Germany. In an excess of patriotism a giant American flag rippled an electric red, white and blue cross its entire facade. In a cellar across the way Kid McCoy's Poodle Dog featured that charm found so notoriously among the worthless. It was the haunt of Nickey Arnstein and Arnold Rothstein.

Another vulgarly vivid spot was a barrel house on Sixth avenue known as Black Ida's, run incongruously enough by an Irishman named Paddy Moriarity. Beer at five cents a scoop included the tastiest bowl of black bean soup with crackers in the world. A rendezvous of nymphs du pave, yet rear tables buzzed with newspaper brouhaha, for many of the best reporters were attracted there after edition time by the fragrant pottage.

As a fledgling magazinist attached tenuously to Hampton's my New York in that period lay between the Knickerbocker Hotel on Forty-second street and Madison Square. Much of the inspiration of those raw apprenticeship days came from walking southward in the dusk to gaze at Diana poising her gift loveliness atop Stanford White's famous tower. In the magnificence of youth, life did not have a grain of grimness. Diana seemed winged and whispering with chariot promises and the surrounding stars asterisks of hope. So buoyant was the well-carpentered business of living that later when I lost my job I didn't believe it. I thought some office blunder sent the discharge to the wrong person. I even practiced how I would dismiss the apology with slight shrug and polite chuckle. Instead, I learned the arcadian days end with the first dismissal. After that existence is an eternal grapple with reality.

On Park Row the literary luncheon place was Hahn's. The Algonquin was little known save as residence of Rex Beach and Ethel Barrymore. William Johnston, of the World and friend of O. Henry's, took me to Hahn's. He went to a table to say good-bye to a gentleman going to England to live. Casually he mentioned it was Robert Frost and my eyes bulged. A print of one of his farm-yard drawings hung over our parlor fireplace. I felt suddenly hurled into the glamorous currents of metropolitan life.

On Sunday nights were those beer-sandwich spreads at Fred and Helena Dayton's—the Bob Wildhacks, Mary McKinnon, Charles and Kathleen Norris, Berton Braley, Herb Roth, Ray Rohn, Ethel Plummer, Norman Jacobson. And that hilarious night of pagan simplicities when H. T. Webster tried, in sudden seizure of gallantry, to flick a tiny wen from the neck of an imperious opera singer, thinking it a cake crumb.

During this epoch I sent a jet of fiction to old McClure's, a stirring romance of the Ohio valley. A re-reading of the rejected manuscript revealed this gem: "Jed's two mules were a sturdy pair, teamed in double harness." Which inspired that old twirp, Arthur McKeogh, meanly to observe tautology had attained its tautest.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

One fact I've paid plenty to learn. You probably won't accept it, preferring to make your own experiments, just as I did. So go ahead and make them! But don't say I didn't warn you that, whatever you do—

IT'S NO USE TRYING TO EXPLAIN.

Naturally, if you live at all abundantly you're going to do scads of things which need explaining. Your friends will doubtless expect explanations. And you'll want to explain—how desperately you'll want to explain!

But no matter how desperate your desire, or urgent your need, the fact still stands—

YOU'LL ONLY MAKE THINGS WORSE IF YOU TRY TO EXPLAIN.

For the simple truth is, the thing can't be done. Though you had the wisdom of Solomon and the eloquence of Cicero, plus the low-down of Winchell, you still couldn't tell anyone why you do what you do, or why you are what you are.

FOR YOU DON'T KNOW YOURSELF!

YOU, YOURSELF, CAN'T EXPLAIN EVEN TO YOURSELF YOUR OWN ACTS.

You doubt that? You're sure, aren't you, that you could tell me in five minutes just why you committed any act of your life? All right—try! Drop this article. Tell me, for example, just why you made a fool of yourself last week by boasting about yourself before that utter stranger.

That's fine—you start right in, full steam. But what's the matter? You're beginning to flounder! Repeating yourself! Going off on detours! Something wrong? You're not getting ahead with that explanation as fast as you thought you could, are you, partner?

Of course you aren't. And the reason's plain enough—

THERE ISN'T ANY ONE REASON WHY ANY OF US DO ANYTHING.

INSTEAD, FOR EVEN THE SIMPLEST ACT, THERE ARE MILLIONS OF REASONS—REASONS THAT GO BACK TO OUR BIRTH, AND THE BIRTH OF OUR FATHERS BEFORE US—REASONS SO TANGLED THAT THERE NEVER YET WAS A MAN WHO COULD TRACE THEM TO THEIR SOURCE.

Literally, God, alone, knows why we do anything.

No, you can't explain. And there's no use trying. And the bigger the boner, the more fool you'll make of yourself if you try to make it all plain.

And the fact is going to make you mighty heartsick, Stranger, when you first discover it. For a while you'll feel a loneliness such as you never felt before—a bitterness and bewilderment—and chances are, like many another fine soul, you'll pick yourself a hole and crawl in for a while. Then, if you have sense, you'll go on to the next lesson—

YOU'LL REALIZE THAT IF THIS THING IS TRUE OF YOU, IT IS ALSO TRUE OF EVERYONE ELSE.

Every man lacks the key to his own mystery. Every man is a prisoner in the dark labyrinth of himself. But, if you look at it right, that's a blessed bond, as well as a reason for bewailin'.

After all, why did you want to explain? So you could come nearer to the other human—stand inside the warmth of his affection and respect and so soothe the pangs of your own humiliation and loneliness. Wasn't that the reason?

BUT COULD ANY POSSIBLE EXPLANATION BRING YOU TWO AS NEAR TOGETHER AS THE REALIZATION OF YOUR MUTUAL DUMBNESS?

Of course it couldn't. There are you, both in the dark. What does it matter if you can't explain your individual acts, so long as you can hold each other's hands, comfort each other's hurts? Love—that's the great thing. Friendliness and tolerance—they need neither understanding nor explanation, and they are within the reach of the slowest brain.

So don't try to explain yourself.

Interesting

But America Prefers ROOMY Cars.

YOU OPEN THE DOOR, THE ROOF LIFTS UP.

England's automobile industry is hampered and discouraged by taxation rules that encourage the building of small and weak cars.

This picture of a British car shows what the English traveling public apparently is coming to, fitted into cars smaller in proportion than tiny wooden cages in which canaries are shipped across the ocean.

The latest arrangement is that of the British engineer who designed this car with the extra low roof owned by the tall girl.

With us when you open the door of your car the lights are automatically turned on.

Here when you open the door of this car one side of the roof is automatically raised and you can get your head under it without mussing your hair or bumping your skull.

It IS ingenious, but this country prefers a system that makes it reasonably economical to build cars with plenty of inside room, without any self-lifting top to make entrance and exit possible.

There is, in fact, too much tendency to "bring the roof down" even on American cars. It is to be hoped that builders will have a change of heart and return to the old fashioned type, with plenty of "room overhead."

Every man who can afford it wants to live in a room with a high ceiling — not in a room with a ceiling that almost touches his hair.

Men and women of common sense like to drive in an automobile that leaves plenty of room above the head—not compelling them to live like a mole in a burrow.

Architects know how to make rooms with high ceilings that are beautiful. Automobile architects well know how to make high ceiling automobiles beautiful. And they will stay that way. Why crouch down in your car?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Matrimonial Addicts

Nobody can understand, in these days, why a woman with the marrying habit keeps on dealing herself a new hand, no matter how disappointing all the other hands she has held have been. People are always astonished when a good-looking woman with a good income remarries.

But there are six big reasons—and lots of minor ones. For, while a husband may no longer be regarded as an absolute necessity, he is and always will be an ASSET.

One big reason why every woman, who has had a husband and lost him, wants another, is for protection. And the more money she has, the more she needs a man to protect her against blue-sky salesmen, fortune hunters, gougers, grafters, professional borrowers and her own foolish impulses. The magic words, "I'll ask my husband," have saved many a woman thousands of dollars.

Second—Every woman needs a husband as an alibi. A lone woman has to argue and invent reasons, in order to escape from dull parties, avoid importunate photographers and brush-salesmen and dodge boring invitations. But "My husband—" is six feet of good excuse, to which there is no answer.

Third—Every woman needs a husband as a background. No matter how inefficient a man may be, he always LOOKS well at the head of a dinner table; and even after you have mixed the cocktails, it always LOOKS more effective if there is a man around to shake them up and pour them and say "Here's how!"

Fourth—Most women DO need masculine advice about lots of things. Even when you don't intend to take it, it's sort of comforting to ask a man's advice and then cry on his shoulder, when you've made a mess of things.

* * *

Fifth: Every woman needs a man around the house for general utility—to open the window when it sticks, climb up on the roof and find the leak, go down in the cellar and see what's the matter with the furnace, get the cork out, move the highboy, hang the mirror and mend the garden hose.

* * *

And, last but not least, what every ex-wife misses is the SOUND OF THE KEY IN THE LATCH! Somebody to come home evenings; somebody to wait for; somebody to TELL things to; somebody to laugh with or worry over. Somebody to round out the day, and give it all a meaning and a purpose. Somebody to make it worth while to order a good dinner and wear a pretty dress.

THE MOTHER TYPE

By Winifred Black

They don't want 'em slim—not in Italy.

The plumper the better, says Mussolini.

And he's made a law about it, thank you.

A good hard and fast, take it or leave it, break it if you dare law. No more pictures of slim beauties in Italian papers. No more slim heroines in Italian films.

The fashion models are not sweet sixteens or girlish darlings—not in Italy.

Full, luxuriant, blooming, healthy, voluptuous beauty, that's the type to be admired from Naples to the Alps, and don't you forget it for one single minute.

The normal man admires the mother type, says Mr. Mussolini, and the mother type is really the normal woman.

Talk about a dictator!

Well, for my part, I agree with Mussolini.

Of course, I don't see how he has any right to impose his ideas of health and beauty on every woman in Italy, but just the same I think he has the right idea.

Honestly now, gentlemen of the jury, how do you feel about it?

Do you really love to see the girl of your choice, rouging and powdering and making up her eyes—in public?

It's all up to you, gentlemen, if you want wives and mothers, you'll have to show the girls that you want 'em.

I know fine, natural, deep-hearted women, who spend their youth trying to pretend that they are lightheaded butterflies, without a wish in their hearts for anything but the passing admiration of every man they meet.

They diet and exercise and fret about their figures.

They fuss over their complexions, they dye their hair—all because they think, that's what you men want.

Well, is it, or isn't it?

Do your choosing, gentlemen—you can make the women of your nation just exactly the type you want them to be—make no mistake about that.

But whisper—you can't marry a butterfly and expect her to turn into a good substantial hen, or even an agreeable nightingale.

Butterflies are butterflies, you know—and nothing else.

Make no mistake about that.

If you want a woman like your mother or like what your grandmother was when she was a bride—you'll have to act as your father and your grandfather did—and pick her out.

Isn't It So?

No legacy is so rich as honesty.

Plough deep while sluggards sleep.

Experience keeps a dear school but fools will learn in no other.

We should have very little pleasure if we did not sometimes flatter ourselves.

All the passions make us commit faults, but love makes us commit the most ridiculous ones.
